Armed postal police urged

CLUB ACT WITH DIFFERENCE was performed by Jerry Eyestone, left, and partner D.J.Hamilton, for causeway audience Wednesday. Pair, who hail from Port Townsend, usually work the club circuit under professional name of Bonzo and Bosco. They sling clubs, jokes and patter during their 15-minute act and accept donations ranging from cold beer, fresh fruit and even money. When they're not on road entertaining, they're running non-profit theatre back home in Port Townsend.

Lawyers, unions irate at security proposal

Times News Services

The post office should be allowed to set up its own police force with the right to carry arms, make arrests and conduct electronic surveillance of workers, the Marin commission of inquiry was told Wednesday.

John Foster, director for security and investigation for the four western provinces and the territories, said that peace officer status would enable the department to pounce on offenders instead of waiting for local police to move.

But the proposal was met by immediate reaction from the Canadian Bar Association which argued such a move would set a dangerous precedent leading to creation of numerous other private police forces.

The request has also sparked fierce opposition from the two million-member Canadian Labor Congress and the four unions representing postal employees.

Greg Brodsky of Winnipeg, vice-chairman of the bar association's criminal justice section, told the commission into post office security headed by Ontario county court judge Rene Marin that creation of the force would mean postmasters-general would have a private army at their disposal.

The next step, said Brodsky, would be for Crown corporations, other departments, public utilities and federal agencies that now require some kind of investigatory branch to request that they, too, have peace officer status under the law.

"This is a phenomenon which cannot be allowed nor supported," he said.

"It is not always possible to monitor the forces as they exist today. It would be imprudent to create numerous independent forces which would not then be almost impossible to control."

Brodsky said a postal police force would be an unfounded cost to taxpayers.

Existing forces are well-trained and equipped to handle crimes involving the post office, he said.

While admitting theft in the post office is a problem, Brodsky said difficulties exist because police forces are now taxed to their limits because of manpower and financial shortages.

Instead of a new force, he suggested special detachments be set up within existing police forces to deal with post office crime.

He said the current system in the post office, in which the department operates an internal security system similar to that in large department stores, works well.

But Foster, a former RCMP veteran, said the department would need "double, perhaps triple" its current staff of 24 inspectors.

Foster had no real idea of the total value of money and other property stolen from the mail. Officials find open envelopes strewn on the floor and in garbage cans but they don't know if the thefts involve just a single employee or several.

Poachers hit Golden Gate

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Hungry Southeast Asian refugees are setting snares in Golden Gate Park for stray dogs, squirrels, pigeons and ducks.

The poachers in the large park in the middle of the city are believed to be from the primitive mountainous regions of Southeast Asia, said Jim Meyer, director of the Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration.

"It's not really strange in their culture," said Meyer, who is head of the refugee relocation center set up at Hamilton Air Force Base in nearby Marin County. While none of the foragers is from the base, he said many of them probably are among families relocated to San Francisco.

"All these people have really been transported very quickly into an entirely different culture. It's like coming from the 10th century," said Meyer.

The refugees are undoubtedly after food, but whether they are driven to it out of poverty isn't clear. One woman caught in a group of 11 Cambodians and Laotians foraging in the 1,200-acre park was carrying four $100 bills with her, investigators said.

The latest incident occurred Monday, when park patrol officer Michael Lawson and partner Michael Del Torre caught the 11 refugees — four adults and seven juveniles — gathering plants near the park conservatory.

About a month ago, Lawson saw a group of what he said were Southeast Asians hunting in the park. He gave chase and the frightened poachers fled, dropping their catch behind.

"There were 10 dead squirrels and eight pigeons," said Lawson. "What they do is set rat traps with peanuts where the cheese is supposed to go. Then the squirrel comes by, grabs the peanut and boom"

Like it or not, islanders will pay for public transit

Gulf Island residents are going to help pay for public transit deficits whether they like it or not.

After lengthy debate and a lot of procedural manoeuvering Wednesday, the Capital Regional District board voted 30-22 to have the Gulf Islands remain in the transit area and pay their share of the costs.

The debate marked the sixth time directors had argued about the transit exclusion issue.

The controversial topic was brought to a head by board chairman Jim Campbell, director for the Outer Gulf Islands.

Campbell claimed he was given a mandate for support of public transit in the November election and quoting section 240 of the Municipal Act, asked the board to reconsider a July motion excluding the Gulf Islands.

The exclusion of the Gulf Islands — particularly Salt Spring — has been a hot potato ever since the provincial government decided to take public transit away from B.C. Hydro and give it to the CRD.

In a letter asking that the Outer Gulf Islands not be excluded, Campbell said: "From my point of view as a Gulf Islander, it is highly desirable to provide a fast, convenient alternative to the automobile as a means of getting the island resident into the business districts of Victoria and Sidney and back home.

"The existing service is so inadequate that for many islanders it does not even seem to exist. As a consequence, over the last several years the possession of a private automobile has become almost a necessity for islanders."

A motion by Sidney Mayor Norma Sealey, who is also chairman of the CRD's transit committee, to deal with the issue of excluding Salt Spring Island and the Outer Gulf Islands separately was defeated 26 to 19.

Then when Campbell called for another vote on the issue, Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier, obviously angry, stomped out of the board room temporarily, saying: "How stupid do you think we are?"

Salt Spring Island director Yvette Valcourt said she had a petition with 529 signatures of Outer Gulf Island residents who want to opt out.

Director John Mika, who earlier unsuccessfully challenged Campbell's decision to bring the matter to a head, argued that the Gulf Islands, because they are separated by water from the rest of the regional district, should not be in the public transit area.

"It doesn't enhance the board to go against geography. It doesn't make sense to put buses on the islands," Mika said.

Metchosin director Mac Tipton said he still believes the entire regional district should be involved in public transit and said the CRD is even prepared to provide parking space on the islands to make the bus system more viable.

'Jailed' children freed

MELBOURNE (AP) — Police stormed a fortress-like home here today to free the last of eight children jailed up to 10 years by their father, a Yugoslav immigrant and member of a religious cult banning contact with the outside world.

The four children still inside, aged 2 to 12, were freed when a group of 30 detectives, police and a doctor raided the house in the western suburb of Tottenham about 7 a.m. as their father, 46-year-old Miroslav Kolak, slept.

The children were found healthy although unnaturally pale and one of them screamed as she was brought outside because she had not seen normal light for many months.

They said Kolak was charged on four counts of unlawful imprisonment and one of assault.

Police learned of the children's captivity from Kolak's 16-year-old daughter, who broke out of the intensely-guarded house.

Rocks rumble down Mt. Fuji

TOKYO (AP) — Hundreds of rocks up to two metres in diameter tumbled from the upper slopes of Mount Fuji today, killing 11 climbers and injuring at least 20 others, police said.

More than three million people climb or visit the barren, conical mountain every year.

2 killed without helmets

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two helmetless motorcyclists who took advantage of a court ruling Monday striking down B.C.'s compulsory helmet law have been killed in separate accidents.

Wayne Thomas Cummingham, 23, of Fraser Lake, died Wednesday night when the motorcycle he was riding collided with a car on Highway 16, about four kilometres west of the central B.C. community.

His passenger, Debbie McCulley, 16, of Vanderhoof, who also was not wearing a helmet, was in stable condition in the intensive care unit of Vanderhoof hospital.

In the other accident, police said it was pretty evident that a 28-year-old man riding without a helmet died of head injuries when his motorcycle crashed in Vancouver.

Robert Gladstone was killed when his machine grounded a footpeg on a corner and tumbled end over end. A passenger, who also was helmetless, was in stable condition.

Bank rate dips

OTTAWA (CP) — The Bank of Canada rate declined fractionally to 10.26 per cent today from 10.39 per cent last week, but consumer borrowers are not expected to benefit immediately.

Holy war 'only answer' to Jerusalem: Saudis

The Associated Press

Saudi Arabia, the world's biggest oil exporter, said that "holy war" is the only way to deal with Israel's annexation of Jerusalem. But Israel said it is not "shocked or worried" by the statement, and most of the 13 states with embassies in the holy city resisted Arab pressures to move.

In a statement issued Wednesday, Saudi Arabia, long a moderate amidst the Middle East's more radical regimes, said Israel's new Jerusalem law approved two weeks ago showed that a "desire for restraint and moderation" is useless in dealing with the Jewish state.

The oil-rich kingdom also warned the West — and in particular, parties to the 1978 Camp David peace accord signed by Israel and Egypt and sponsored by the United States — that Arab and Islamic states could not be blamed "if we took the matters in our hands in one battle at whatever the cost and whatever the duration, alloting to it (the battle) all our capabilities and possibilities — everything, expensive and cheap."

The Saudi statement was made by Crown Prince Fahd, who rules the kingdom on a day-to-day basis and is the most likely successor to King Khaled. The statement, carried by the Gulf news agency, was "a pledge from us to the Arabs and Moslems," Fahd said. He indicated the Saudis are trying to set up an Arab summit meeting to form a unified stand on the Jerusalem issue.

The Palestinian autonomy talks are deadlocked over differing views on the extent of autonomy for the 1.2 million Palestinians living on land seized by Israel in the 1967 Mideast war.

Israeli foreign ministry spokesman Naftali Lavie told reporters in Jerusalem today: "It's known to us this is the position of some Saudi leaders. They find it necessary to express themselves in such a radical way on the Israel-Arab conflict or on Jerusalem."

Clean bill for SC spending

An eight-month internal investigation into $246,000 in unreported election campaign expenses of the Social Credit party has exonerated party members of any wrongdoing, Attorney-General Allan Williams said Wednesday.

But Williams says he will ask Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe and the province's chief electoral officer to plug possible loopholes in the B.C. Elections Act.

Williams made the comment Wednesday after an eight-month investigation by his ministry into $246,000 in unreported election campaign expenses made by the B.C. Social Credit party.

Two lawyers investigating the incident which occurred during the May, 1979, provincial election concluded that no charges should be laid, Williams said.

The probe was ordered last December after it was revealed seven months after the election that the party had not reported the expenditures — $182,000 in late bills and $65,000 in cash disbursed by former campaign manager Dan Campbell.

The Elections Act requires disclosure of spending within 60 days of polling day and Williams said the act, as it now stands, would not support the laying of charges.

Campbell's actions were labelled then as an oversight. News reports said Campbell was handing out $1,000 bills and not requiring receipts. Campbell later resigned, saying the media made it difficult for him to carry on his job.

Campaign spending provisions require nothing more than a flat one-figure declaration of the total amount a party or candidate spends. The declaration does not have to include an itemized list of how the money was used nor does it have to be supported by receipts.

"The only obligation is to file returns to the extent that they are aware," Williams said. "There's no definition of what the central committee of a political party is, no definition of what a detailed statement is required. Based on that evidence, no charges will be laid.

"It's quite obvious that the intention of the section is to require the filing of statements in some detail," he said. "I also think that the 60-day period in which statements are to be filed is perhaps too short.

"There should be a requirement that if complete returns are not available during whatever period is established that there be subsequent returns provided."

Williams said although the investigation took eight months to complete, it didn't take long to conclude the legislation was inadequate. But it was the "aspects that arose from it that caused concern in my ministry."

B.C., Alta. escape forecast recession

OTTAWA (CP) — Six out of 10 provinces will suffer a recession this year, with only British Columbia and Alberta showing significant economic growth, predicts the quarterly forecast of the Conference Board in Canada released today.

But better news is around the corner, the board says, as a modest recovery — a 2.2-per-cent increase in gross national product — is expected throughout the country in 1981.

(Two Canadian banks, however, predict the country's gross national product will decline this year for the first time since 1954. See story on page 8.)

The latest forecast from the conference board, a non-profit business research group in Ottawa, says only the outlook for B.C., showing a 1.4-per-cent increase this year, has improved since the previous quarter.

The forecasts exclude the effects of inflation.

Economic growth is expected to decline this year by 0.6 per cent in Manitoba and two per cent in Saskatchewan. The outlook there as deteriorated because of a prolonged drought and farm output now is expected to fall by 14 per cent and 17 per cent respectively.

Newfoundland's output is expected to drop 2.7 per cent, the most severe of all provinces, because goods-producing industries are likely to suffer much more than expected earlier. Unanticipated weaknesses in Prince Edward Island's service sector will cause a 1.4 per cent drop in growth this year.

Elsewhere provincial economies are turning out as expected, the board says, with production of goods and services down 0.9 per cent in Ontario, and one per cent in New Brunswick and only slight gains of 0.1 per cent in Quebec and 0.4 per cent in Nova Scotia.

Alberta continues to lead the country in economic growth with an increase of 4.2 per cent this year and 5.3 per cent in 1981.

Killer bear hunted

SUMMERLAND (CP) — A hunt resumes today for one or more bears officials believe killed a 50-year-old Summerland man whose remains were found in bush area near this south Okanagan community Wednesday.

Clothing scattered near the scene, about 20 kilometres west of Summerland, was identified as that of George Brisch, who had not been seen since he left for the Summerland garbage dump Sunday morning.

There were signs of a violent struggle about 160 metres from Brisch's car, which was found in a abandoned gravel pit just off Isintok Lake road.

Human remains and clothing were scattered widely in the area.

Another victim of Allen

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP) — An ocean-going oil barge ran onto a hidden shoal in the Gulf of Mexico 40 kilometres north of Port Mansfield, Tex., early today, bringing to four the number of vessels disabled because of hurricane Allen.

"This is just another case of shoaling, caused by the hurricane," said U.S. Coast Guard spokesman Dan Dewell.

The Chemlink 404 ran aground while under tow in the middle of the Texas intracoastal waterway.

"The ship is in semi-protected waters so we don't expect any real damage to the ship or oil spillage," Dewell said.

Street mishap victim named

Saanich police have released the name of a 24-year-old woman who remains in critical condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital after being struck by a car Tuesday night in front of her home.

She is Maureen Czop, 476 Boleskine.

Police said the driver, whose name has been withheld, was not to blame for the 11:15 p.m. accident.

Clean bill for SC

The $246,000 in unreported election expenses was uncovered Dec. 12 by campaign chairman Les Peterson hours after he was named by Premier Bill Bennett to investigate whether members of his staff had breached the act. It was then Williams ordered the internal investigation.

Campbell, who was about to become B.C.'s representative at Ottawa when he resigned, said when he discovered the $65,000 had not been reported he took immediate action to report it.

Peterson said at the time that Campbell thought the money had been declared by Ian Adam, a Vancouver stockbroker and party fund-raiser.

Campbell's reported handing out of $1,000 bills for party workers' expenses without requiring receipts did not violate the Elections Act, but Williams said he felt it was "very bad practice for anybody to handle money on that basis."

Turner would have loved it

NEW YORK — John Turner would like this convention.

As Big Blue Eyes, the Duke of Windsor of Canadian politics, watches the Madison Square Garden fandangle from his summer retreat, he must contemplate that the Americans do things much better.

Mainly — from Turner's point of view — better south of the border, because of the limitation of the ruler to just two terms and eight years in power. Poor John, by contrast, grows mouldy on the sidelines, waiting for Pierre Elliott Reincarnation to find another reason for hanging on as long as Mackenzie King.

The Yanks, being more democratic than Canadians and therefore more suspicious of authority, like to remove their heroes from the temptations of power before they grow too fond of them.

They also tend to be patient enough to wait for four years. That's what has happened here. Teddy Kennedy made an absolutely brilliant speech to the Democratic convention that was supposed to be a concession address, but was actually an application to be president.

The only problem is that the application, implicit in everything he said, was for 1984 and this just happens to be, for those of you not paying attention, 1980.

There's a strange atmosphere in this town. The President of the United States, having whipped Teddy Kennedy throughout the primaries just as he promised, and having beaten off the Kennedy attempt to have a completely "open" convention, has an uncontested nomination.

But Teddy was holding all the cards

But he flew from Camp David into New York Wednesday to find practically all the cards in the hands of the man he had defeated.

New York is a Kennedy town and the glamor of the clan dominates wherever they go. Carter outsiders, who remain outsiders despite four years in the White House, feel uncomfortable and unwanted here — and it shows.

More important, the Kennedy forces have dominated the floor of the convention, pushing through far more radical proposals on the economy and on women's rights than Carter's conservative wing of the party wants. Jimmy Carter, the albatross of Billy chained to him, is at an even lower point in the polls than Tricky Dicky Nixon was, and trails the somnolent Ronny Reagan by more than 20 points in the politics dominated by Dr. Gallup.

The only possible way to pull a Harry Truman by November is with the help of Kennedy, who by the end of the primaries had learned to be a better campaigner than Carter.

The capper was Teddy's convention speech which, a clutch of marvelling Ottawa reporters agreed, was about the most impressive podium job they had heard since Pierre Trudeau's final referendum spellbinder.

The president himself phoned Kennedy afterward to congratulate him on "one of the greatest speeches I have ever heard."

The kid showed he had guts

It was truly that — a great speech — brilliantly and passionately delivered by the Kennedy kid brother that everyone, months ago, had concluded simply did not have the brains or the guts of his two elder brothers.

Kennedy — and the American public — have gone through an interesting transformation over the nine wearying months of the primaries. When it was clear he was beaten, the man who cheated in college and waffled or lied over the death of Mary Jo Kopechne, didn't fold. Instead he pressed on and in the end was whipping Carter in the major states. It was too late, but he persisted in a losing cause at the convention, trying to overturn the rules and free the delegates to vote as they wished.

When that too was defeated, he finally conceded, but then gave the speech of his life, a speech that turned Madison Square Garden into turmoil and delayed proceedings for close to an hour.

Teddy Kennedy, the mental runt of the litter, delivered that speech in a way that almost signifed relief. He had paid his dues, stoically ridden out the Chappaquiddick humiliation and had done it the tough way — and his guilt was over.

There's the sense that the American public, which really wouldn't have accepted him this time, is ready to forgive and to look forward to 1984.

Now he's the heir apparent. Now Carter must come to him because he needs him so badly to combat Reagan and can't win the Northeastern industrial states without him.

Teddy Kennedy — not Jimmy Carter — is the most content man in New York today.

At the finish of that memorable speech, he said "The work goes on, the cause endures, the hope still lives, and the dream shall never die."

He is 48. See you, as he would say, in 1984.

Lawyers trying to block notary

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lawyers in Vernon are going to B.C. Supreme Court to try to prevent a recently-graduated notary public from hanging her shingle out in this central Interior city.

"I can't believe that in this day and age a professional association can do this," said Barbara White of nearby Armstrong. "They've drummed up some archaic statute to prevent me from working."

White wants to replace one of Vernon's four notaries. They compete with the area's 38 lawyers for simple legal work, such as preparation of deeds, mortgages and simple wills.

The Vernon Bar Association's challenge is based on a 1921 statute that gives lawyers the right to formally oppose new notary licences they feel aren't required in a given district.

The statute has been seldom used since a "gentleman's agreement" was made in 1957 between notaries and the Law Society of B.C. to end a bitter rivalry between the two professions.

That agreement stipulated the numbers of notaries would remain constant. And for the last 23 years, their numbers have held steady at about 300.

Lawyer Robert Gillespie said fully qualified lawyers should continue to do the business the notary left behind because "we feel (lawyers) can do the work better."

Ms. White disputes the contention her services aren't needed in Vernon. She says she has 20 letters of recommendation from businesses in the city, adding that many businesses prefer to use notaries for simple legal tasks because they charge less than lawyers.

$2M in vault loot on auction block

VANCOUVER (CP) — Coin and bullion dealers from across Canada and the United States are submitting bids on about $2 million worth of the loot recovered from the 1977 Vancouver Safety Deposit Vault robbery.

Coins from around the world dating back to the 1800s, several of the rare 1954 two-dollar bills with the "devil's head" featured on Queen Elizabeth's hair, and about 1,100 ounces of gold, have attracted dealers from New York, Los Angeles, Boston, Montreal and Toronto.

They are submitting written tenders for purchase of the valuables whose ownership has either not been claimed or cannot be proved.

The goods are listed in the first two volumes of court-appointed receiver Donald Henfrey's inventory of the valuables recovered from the ransacking three years ago of 1,200 safety deposit boxes.

The gold sales, likely worth just under $1 million, must go before B.C. Supreme Court for approval. Sale price will be tied to market price on the date of approval, possibly months down the road.

Tenders will be opened publicly on Friday at the board room of Clark, Wilson and Co., in Vancouver, and bids (except for the gold) will be approved or rejected the following week.

In the next month or so jewelry and documents from the third volume of inventory — including bonds and share certificates and some rubies and diamonds among the junk jewelry will go on sale.

Bulk of the silver and Canadian coins will be in the fourth volume of Henfrey's accounting, which goes before the court for approval in mid-October.

Safety deposit box owners will receive the proceeds from the sales on a pro-rated basis. For example, 1,095 krugerrands were claimed — but only 105 krugerrands were recovered — so the payout will be 6.3 cents on the dollar.

Those with cash claims will receive 33 cents on the dollar and some Canadian gold coins will bring claimants 75 cents on the dollar.

The real losers are those with identifiable claims, such as gold bars with serial numbers, that were never found. Unless they carried insurance, they won't get a cent.

Only two claims, involving coin collections, were doubtful enough to be brought before B.C. Supreme Court Justice George Murray for a ruling. Last week he reduced one claim, and dismissed the other with the suggestion the attorney-general consider fraud charges.

In all, only about 45 per cent of all claims have been recovered — meaning at least $1 million was with the robbers who escaped.

In January, 1977, the crooks foiled the vault's "burglar-proof" security system by drilling their way from a basement storeroom to the 5,000 safety deposit boxes.

They had got into the building the day before with a truckload of sophisticated equipment through a back-alley fire escape.

Four of the five who were caught at Vancouver International Airport got five-to-eight year jail terms after pleading guilty to charges of possession of stolen property. The fifth man skipped bail of $50,000.

Police chief gets six months

NELSON (CP) — Suspended police chief George Barr was sentenced to six months in prison Wednesday after pleading guilty July 3 to seven counts of making a false statement.

Barr, 44, is this West Kootenay city's third chief constable to be suspended in eight years.

Stays of proceedings had been entered earlier on 17 other charges.

Barr, who was suspended from the force last Dec. 8 after serving as chief since early 1976, resigned after sentencing.

Court was told that between September, 1973, and December, 1979, Barr knowingly made false statements in order to obtain loans and credit extensions totalling $150,000 from seven area banks and credit unions.

Provincial court Judge L.J. Keffer scolded area bank managers for neglecting to check Barr's property titles before extending credit. He found it "utterly incredible" that the managers extended loans on the strength of three properties in which Barr held no equity.

Barr used as collateral a 225-acre farm and a house near Nelson and a house at Victoria. But Crown counsel Len Doust said Barr used increasingly complex deception to delay presenting titles for property he didn't own.

He said the deceptions included a claim of sole ownership of the property and claims of co-ownership with a common-law wife who was unwilling to present the titles.

Defence counsel Dermod Owen-Flood of Victoria laid the "moral guilt and responsibility on the banks themselves."

He said the bank managers' plea about trusting the police chief because of his position held the "hollow ring of hindsight."

He said they had been "reaching for quick substantial loans without checking."

No proof in oil pudding

An economist at the University of Alberta recently speculated that the enormous profits of the oil industry in Canada were not being totally re-invested in energy-related concerns. In fact, he suggested, much of the money was being used to diversify the holdings of multi-national corporations in Canada and that Canadians, through the purchase of gasoline and home heating oil, were aiding non-residents to purchase an increased share of the Canadian economy.

To a certain extent the economist was vindicated by a federal energy department report on the 1979 performance of the Canadian oil industry. After-tax profits reached a record high of $4.7 billion, up 54 per cent from 1978. Those profits were recorded in a year that oil prices went up by only $1 a barrel. Since the price of crude is expected to increase by $3 a barrel this year, the outlook for the industry is, to say the least, promising.

But, despite the increase in profits, reinvestment in oil and gas exploration dropped by 13 per cent over 1978. Also, diversification by the industry into other energy fields such as coal and uranium decreased to about $66 million, or half of what was spent in the previous year. However, investment in non-energy related enterprises was up sharply.

Although control of Canada's oil industry is slowly shifting into the hands of Canadian residents, non-residents still owned 72 per cent of the industry and controlled 80 per cent of the revenues. Ten years ago non-residents owned 80 per cent and controlled 90 per cent of the revenues.

If the industry is investing more money in non-energy related businesses, it is fair to assume, as the Alberta economist pointed out, that non-residents are increasing their control in other sectors of the economy.

Oil industry spokesmen have argued repeatedly that high profits are necessary if they are to undertake the exploration necessary to give Canada a measure of fossil-fuel self-sufficiency. They point out, with cause, that the industry is one of the few that will cease to exist if profits are not reinvested and new fuel sources found.

Most Canadians likely appreciate the logic in such an argument, but the proof must lie in the investment figures. The figures released by the energy department have not demonstrated to Canadians that they are contributing to oil companies' higher profits as payment for a secure energy future.

Domestic oil prices will continue to increase as will the oil industry's after-tax profits. If the decline in reinvestment in oil and gas exploration isn't reversed in the near future, the industry is begging more government interference.

An interesting sidelight is that total reinvestment by Canadian-owned companies rose by 40 per cent over the previous year. Investment by foreign-controlled firms increased by 16 per cent.

The inside track

The federal government may be about to impose freedom of information legislation upon itself, but it isn't having much success imposing similar rules on the corporate world, particularly the oil industry.

Ottawa has asked exploration companies to divulge confidential information on signifigant crude oil and gas finds to certain government officials. The request has been made to avoid cabinet ministers being put in awkward situations. Apparently some ministers find it embarrassing to be trying to answer questions about oil and gas finds from a media that knows more about what is going on at the drilling rigs.

Industry spokesman have complained that complying with such a request could pose a conflict of interest situation for companies with legal obligations to their shareholders. Some are worried that Ottawa's request is politically motivated and that the recipients of confidential information might be tempted to misuse it.

Also, the length of the list of officials to be notified has alarmed some industry people who question whether advance knowledge of valuable information might not prompt some people to run to their stockbrokers.

Laying an information pipeline into Ottawa is going to be as difficult as building a gas pipeline from Prudhoe Bay.

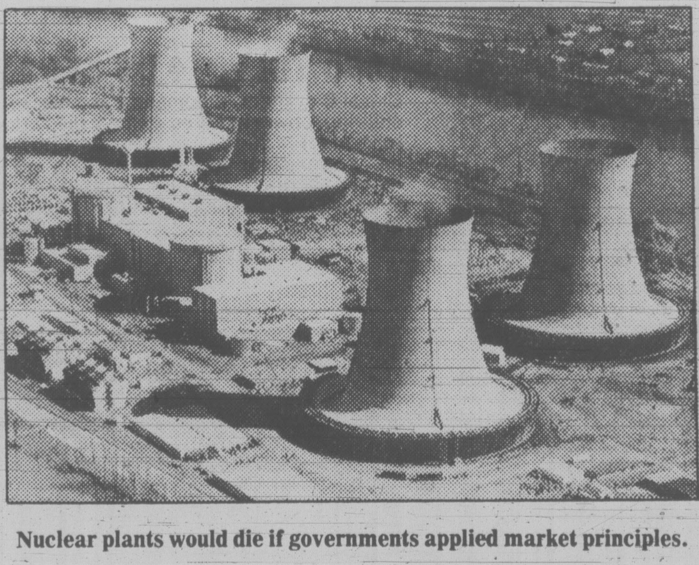
Unsafe and uneconomic

The arguments for and against nuclear power have come to seem at the same time familiar to us and numbingly difficult to resolve. But the terms of the debate may be changing. New circumstances, new facts, put the old issues in a different light — and greatly strengthen the case against nuclear plants to generate electricity.

That is the message of a provocative article in the summer issue of the quarterly Foreign Affairs, just out. It is a disturbing piece, one that means to shake assumptions on a fundamental subject and does. Its scientific points will be debated by the experts. But much of its logic rests on practical arguments that ought to be meaningful to politicians and ordinary citizens in a democracy.



Nuclear plants would die if governments applied market principles.

Soft path

The piece, called "Nuclear Power and Nuclear Bombs," is by Amory B. Lovins, a physicist and consultant on energy policy; his wife L. Hunter Lovins, a lawyer, and Leonard Ross, a former California Public Utiity commissioner who now teaches law at the University of California, Berkeley. Amory Lovins published a ground-breaking article on the "soft path" in energy — the development of renewable resources — in Foreign Affairs four years ago. That became a basic reference point in the energy debate, and the new piece may well have the same kind of impact.

We have assumed, the article says, that the world-wide spread of nuclear power is economically desirable, is necessary to reduce dependence on oil and can be regulated by international agreement so that it will not lead to the proliferation of nuclear weapons. The authors squarely challenge those assumptions.

Nuclear power stations, they say, have turned out to be much more costly than conventional generating plants. Between 1971 and 1978, one study shows, the capital cost per kilowatt went up twice as fast for nuclear as for coal plants, even including the need for the latter to meet rigorous anti-pollution standards. Nuclear now costs 50 per cent more than coal, and tighter safety regulation after Three Mile Island will increase the differential.

That economic reality is reflected in the market. All over the world, plans for installation of nuclear generating plants have been cut way back. The United States, Brazil, West Germany, China — all kinds of societies have simply found the economic cost too forbidding.

"No vendor in the world appears to have made a nickel on total reactor sales," the authors write. Large developing countries have shown declining interest "despite intensive sales efforts and universal subsidies." Only in such centrally-planned economies as those of France and the Soviet Union "is bureaucratic power sufficient to override economic facts" — and even in the USSR the building of nuclear plants is way behind target.

Nor, they say, is nuclear power a rational substitute for oil. Nuclear plants make electricity, and only about a tenth of the world's oil goes for that purpose. Most of it is used for such things as vehicle fuel and petrochemical feedstocks.

So the most massive increases in nuclear power would have little effect on the urgent questions of world oil prices and supplies. For example, quadrupling Japan's nuclear capacity by the year 1990 would reduce its dependence on imported oil by about 10 per cent.

"Most governments," the article says, "have viewed the energy problem as simply how to supply more energy of any type, from any source, at any price, to replace oil — as if demand were homogeneous."

But in fact the price and nature of nuclear power makes it economically viable for only about 4 per cent of all energy needs.

As to proliferation of nuclear weapons, the article makes some new and extremely worrying technical arguments. It challenges what has been a premise of all international efforts to keep nuclear weapons from spreading to countries that do not now have them: that power reactors can be designed, operated and monitored so they do not produce material of practical use in making bombs.

All present power reactors produce, as waste, what is called "reactor-grade plutonium," which for various reasons has been considered impractical as material for bombs. But in fact, the authors say, governments or "some subnational groups" could make it into bombs as good as those now made from "weapons-grade plutonium" — or, alternatively, power reactors could be operated so as to produce the latter without greatly increasing costs or being detected.

No safeguards

"We cannot have nuclear power without proliferation," they conclude, "because safeguards cannot succeed either in principle or in practice." But ending the nuclear power program would make it possible to limit the spread of weapons and detect breaches of international controls, because goods and services now used for both reactors and bombs would then be "unambiguously military in intent."

Is it "a fantastic, unrealistic, unachievable goal" to wind down nuclear power programs? No, the authors say; governments would just have to obey the economic principles to which they profess allegiance. They would just have to stop applying "heroic measures to resuscitate and artificially sustain the victim of an incurable attack of market forces."

"To abandon nuclear power," they say, "does not require any government to embrace anti-nuclear sentiment or rhetoric. It can love nuclear power — provided it loves the market more."

Policies vindicate Kennedy

NEW YORK — In the final weeks of his presidential campaign, Ted Kennedy spoke for a lot of unhappy Democrats.

He called President Carter nothing more than "a clone" of Ronald Reagan.

He said Carter had blurred the traditional differences between Democrats and Republicans with his conservative policies on the economy.

He accused the president of abandoning the old, liberal, New Deal policies that have stamped the Democrats since the days of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

The angry words about Carter came from a frustrated and embittered politician — one who had lost the year-long nomination fight that threatened party unity.

Large following

But Kennedy was not just a sore loser. He was echoing the feelings of hard-core Democrats like labor leaders and blacks who have watched, shaking their heads, as Carter led the county into recession and unemployment.

Carter lost primaries in New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Michigan and New Jersey, the big industrial states that are part of the Democratic heartland.

The blacks and jobless who voted for him in 1976 have been disappointed by what one disgruntled Democrat described as "Carter's middle-of-the-road mouth-mush."

With the nomination fight now over, Carter has to spend the next two and a half months putting as much distance as he can between himself and Ronald Reagan. And the Democrats nailed together a platform this week that might help him do the job.

In an embarrasssing repudiation of the president's own policies, the delegates adopted several key economic planks pushed by Senator Kennedy, including a $12 billion job program.

The platform victory Tuesday night was a vindication of Kennedy's campaign for "economic justice" and will help heal the wounds opened up by the Carter-Kennedy confrontration. It puts the Democrats more firmly to the left on economic issues.

Party platforms are about as permanent as the folding chairs at a convention. But this time, Jimmy Carter would ignore the platform at his peril.

He needs the help of Kennedy's supporters in the fall and he needs some clear alternative to Ronald Reagan's conservatism.

With all of Kennedy's economic planks now in the platform, except for wage and price controls, the Democrats stand as far apart from the Republicans as Plains is from Hollywood.

Reagan's Republicans want a 30 per cent tax cut over the next three years, a get-rich-quick scheme that many voters will find appealing.

Labelling this "the new extremism," the Democrats say the tax cut would be inflationary.

Another big issue is energy. In their zeal to get the government off the backs of the people, the Republicans have proposed tax breaks for oil companies, an end to the 55 mile-an-hour speed limit, and fewer environmental restrictions on coal.

Alternative energy

And as if that wasn't enough they also oppose federal spending on energy conservation and solar power.

The Democrats offer a 20-point program that emphasizes conservation, alternate sources of energy and a windfall tax on oil companies.

The clash is just as great on social issues. Republicans want a constitutional amendment prohibiting abortion; the Democrats support federal abortion funding for poor women. The Democrats support gun control and the Equal Rights Amendment, the Republicans are opposed.

From the abolition of food stamps to military superiority over the Soviet Union, the Republicans are champions of the New Right.

The Democrats have no seductive slogans. But Carter's challenge is to get Americans to take a critical look at what Reagan is saying.

Keep Crown

The Honorable Grace McCarthy is to be congratulated for her statement concerning the monarchy as being the first priority in any new constitution. The suggestion that 45 per cent of the Canadian population would like to "drop" the Queen as head of state is the result of the rush to fill the country with immigrants who have no understanding of our system of government, and who do not realize that the few freedoms left to us are ours because of the Crown.

The Crown is not the sovereign. Executive power is invested in the Crown in partnership with parliament. It is not the possession of an individual, especially of an elected official. The Crown is the custodian of the power of the people, as opposed to the uncontrolled power of an elected official or one appointed by that official.

When the head of state and the head of government are the same individual there is trouble ahead, for "absolute power corrupts absolutely", as history has shown.

A constitutional monarchy is not a dictatorship. It is the Queen-in-Parliament — the Crown which protects the people from their own government. Long may she reign! — Rose E. Liscombe, Lazo, B.C.

Speculation

A recent letter by Mrs. Rose Evans of the World Federalists of Canada accused city council, and more particularly, Mayor Tindall and myself, as being insensitive in suggesting that we are about to approach Soochow, our proposed sister city, for help to pay for the Gate of Harmonious Interest soon to be erected in Chinatown. I suspect, by the length of the letter, it was more of an excuse to give the world federalists an issue for publicity. At no time did city council, Mayor Tindall or myself discuss financial aid from Soochow or from any city with regard to the Chinatown restoration program.

Finance is well in line, with the Chinese Community already over their target figure and the remainder, by the citizens of Victoria, moving towards their goal. With any luck, the final target will be reached and the gate should be constructed and in place by next spring.

Soochow being asked for financial assistance was strictly press speculation and probably came from a remark I made at a recent Heritage Advisory Committee meeting where I suggested that I would be making an approach to an unnamed source for financial assistance. This in fact was the Provincial Capital Commission. Any criticism as to Soochow should be levelled at the reporters, as this was a figment of their imagination.

On the other hand, we hope that if time permits, that we could invite the good citizens of Soochow for their input and comments on the design of our gate as we would be delighted to receive any cultural and artistic guidance from our proposed sister city. After all, isn't this what its all about. — Robert H. Wright, Alderman, Victoria City Council.

Benefit to Indians

The recent Gallup poll done in B.C. regarding the retention of the monarchy as head of state in Canada, brings out the fallacy of such polls. How are they conducted? What criteria do they use? Where did they centre their poll? I know none of my family nor my wife's family were asked nor our hosts of friends, and they represent quite a large number of people around the province.

There is one thing certain in all this, and that is the aboriginal peoples of Canada should absolutely agree to retention, at least until their rights and land claims are settled. Their rights and land claims should be proclaimed by the Crown through the Parliament of Canada.

One can see the portent of this by the contempt of the federal government toward the on-going rights and land claims of the Yukon native people and the development permits now issued through-out the whole northern areas under native claim.

People who are concerned should write their MPs, MLAs and the Parliament of Westminister, asking questions and registering their concern, alarm, and shame. — Don D. Fraser, 1161 Burnside Rd. W.

Medical alert

We are members of the medical profession who wish to alert the public about the threat of three Pro Life members being elected to the Victoria General Hospital Board at their September election.

Every public hospital in this province has a hospital society composed of interested members from the community. The hospital board is elected by the members to be their spokesman in the complex delivery of health care at the hospital. In this way the hospital has input and direction from the public that it serves.

The Pro Life movement is concerned with one issue: stopping abortions. Their philosophy is shared by only 5 per cent of the population and yet they have succeeded in electing their members to hospital boards by stacking the hospital society. They now have board members in Powell River, North Vancouver, New Westminster and Langley and plan the same tactic for the Victoria General Hospital.

On September 25th, at Newcombe Auditorium, 8:00 p.m. the Vancouver Island Hospital society will elect three members to the board. Three experienced incumbent members will be re-running; all of whom have outstanding records of hospital and community service; Robert Milne, Keith Terlson, Eugene Kaellis. The single issue Pro Life movement will also run three condidates.

Anyone from the general public, over the age of 18, can join this society and vote in the upcoming election by taking out a hospital society membership for $2.00 before August 25th.

Hospital Society memberships forms are available from the Victoria General Hospital; from our offices; from the James Bay Project and the James Bay Community Centre.

We strongly urge you to become involved in this matter, as the hospital belongs to all the people whom it serves, and should therefore reflect their opinions rather than that of a radical few. — M. Conley, Derek Carroll, Richard Hudson, E. Jane Wright, Heather Cairns, R. Backus, John Miller, Tejinder Sidhu.

Atom bomb test victims sue for compensation

By JOYCE EGGINTON
London Observer

ST. GEORGE, Utah — Early on a spring morning in 1953, Arthur Bruhn's geology class set off on a field trip from their college town of St. George, southern Utah.

About two dozen students piled into cars to drive 30 miles along a climbing road between red sandstone peaks to a ridge where the view to the west across the gritty sand and sagebrush of the high desert was one of vast open space.

They were going to watch the dawn of a new age, and they thought it was rather a lark.

Standing on the ridge, facing towards Nevada, they soon saw a great golden ball, larger and brighter than the sun, climb into the western sky and slowly dissolve into a purplish mushroom shaped cloud.

Fifteen minutes later, in reaction to this atomic bomb test at the Nevada Proving Ground, more than 100 miles away, the ground trembled beneath them.

Teeth fell out

Two other details of the expedition stuck in 19-year-old Jo Ann Taylor's memory. On the drive home, just before entering St. George, the students' cars were stopped by an official and hosed down to remove the fall-out dust. "We thought it was great to have a free car wash," she said. But, later that morning, Jo Ann combed her hair and was horrified when a thin layer of skin from the top of her scalp came off like a cap, and all the fine hair with it. She had been the only member of the party not wearing a hat.

Her hair never did grow back. Knowing nothing about the effects of radiation, her doctor diagnosed severe sunburn. Then her teeth started falling out.

In light of today's knowledge, Arthur Bruhn's expedition was madness. But the atomic experience of the 1950s was limited. People who lived in scattered communitites of southern Utah, south-eastern Nevada and north-western Arizona — who were in the immediate path of fall-out from the Nevada tests and did not know it — regularly watched the pre-dawn atomic explosions.

Parents would wake small children and take them outdoors to see "the firework". Some couples, including Arthur Bruhn and his wife, would camp all night on the mountain tops. Federal government officials stated repeatedly there was no danger, and local residents believed them.

Bruhn took the extra precaution of writing to the military commander at the Nevada Proving Grounds to ask whether it was safe for his geology class to watch the shot. Absolutely, came the reply. Jo Ann remembers being shown the letter with the commander's signature. "He said it was a fine thing for young people to have this experience," she recalls. Today, aged 46, she has a malignant brain tumor and cancer of the bone marrow and kidneys, while Arthur Bruhn is dead of leukemia.

Jo Ann has lost touch with most of her classmates, but knows of one boy who died of leukemia and a girl who had breast cancer. Only recently have the families of victims made the connection between these malignancies and exposure to the atomic tests of the 1950s.

At the time, St. George, with a population of 4,500, was the largest community in the 200-mile arc where the fall-out fell heaviest. Recently released government documents, which remained secret for a quarter of a century, clearly show that any scientific doubt about the long-term effects of fall-out were swept aside by the larger consideration that the U.S. had to develop bigger and more devastating atom bombs.

The world's first atomic bomb was exploded in great secrecy in the New Mexican Desert in 1945. The next two were dropped within weeks on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. At the end of the Second World War American scientists believed it would take another 20 years for Russia to develop its own atomic bomb, but, thanks to an efficient spy system, Moscow had the secret in three. There was panic in Washington. The U.S. government felt it had to maintain its lead in the atomic weapons race to prevent the outbreak of a war from which the world could never recover.

Atomic shell from cannon explodes on Nevada test site, May 25, 1953

Any more atomic explosions within the U.S. were ruled out as unacceptable. New sites were found in the Marshall Islands, and the unsuspecting peasants of Bikini and Eniwetok evacuated. But by June of 1950 the U.S. had become involved in the Korean War and it became too risky to ship atomic bombs to the Pacific. Another important consideration was the physical safety of scientists and the travelling time which had to be taken from their secret research. By now the hydrogen bomb was being developed, and the search for an American testing range began in earnest.

A 1,350-square-mile site in the Nevada Desert was chosen, not only for its isolation, but because it was calculated that prevailing winds would carry the fall-out away from the populous part of southern California and in a swathe which would miss Las Vegas and Salt Lake City. The area likely to catch the worst fall-out was a region of mountains and deserts, mostly in southern Utah, described in official documents as 'relatively uninhabited'. Nevertheless, between 25,000 and 30,000 people lived there.

UDALL . . . takes on suits

"The federal government created a new class of people: relative uninhabitants," says Stewart Udall, former secretary of the interior, who as a private lawyer is currently suing the federal government on behalf of almost 1,000 civilian victims of cancer, which he claims to be a direct result of repeated exposure to fall-out.

The above-ground Nevada tests lasted from 1951 to the limited test ban treaty of 1962, after which they went underground. Udall is now alleging that the "relative uninhabitants" were the unwitting subjects of a calculated experiment to determine whether fall-out caused health damage.

"In the early days, the Atomic Energy Commission made a quick judgment that it did not, so they continued with the tests," Udall said. "But the only thing they used as a measuring stick was external exposure — the dust which fell on people. They didn't calculate what would happen when it got into the food chain or when it was inhaled. They simply assumed that if you didn't get radiation burns, your body may have suffered some insult but it would recover. Later, when evidence began to show up to the contrary, they ignored the evidence."

Sheep affected

The first clues came from several sheep farmers based in Cedar City, about 50 miles north of St. George. The life of these men follows an annual migratory pattern. In summer their flocks graze on mountain slopes close to home. In winter they move west to the warmer ranges of Nevada. The sheep herders are rugged men who lead a lonely outdoor camp life for weeks on end. Every spring they head back home, in time for lambing. They didn't realize it, but once atomic testing started both their outward and homeward journeys were in the direct path of the fall-out.

In the spring of 1953 there was a series of particularly dirty atomic tests known as Operation Upshot-Knotholt. These bombs were exploded from wooden towers only 300 feet from the ground. Such low explosions inevitably create huge clouds of dust which become radioactive and travel with the wind. A sudden rainfall can cause a deluge of fall-out. Or atmospheric conditions can shunt radioactive clouds against mountain sides, creating unexpected "hot spots".

The sheep must have been subject to many of these onslaughts. Two sheep-herders tell of a man in heavy protective clothing driving up to them shouting, "Get out of here fast. You are in a real hot spot." Large herds of sheep can't be moved quickly, the herders explained. The official shook his head and drove off.

On the trail back to Cedar City in the spring of 1953, hundreds of sheep died. Many had deep burns on their faces where they had foraged close to the ground. Many aborted. Others gave birth to dying or deformed lambs. All told, 4,300 sheep out of about 18,000 perished.

Convinced that this was radiation damage, some Cedar City sheep farmers sued the federal government. They lost the case for want of proof. The Department of Energy (successor to the Atomic Energy Commission) maintained that the sheep died from malnutrition and ingestion of poisonous weeds.

Now, it emerges that crucial evidence was held back by government witnesses. Professor Stephen Brower, who at the time was the University of Utah's local agricultural agent, said that every time the farmers tried to get hold of the government's research material on the sheep, it was classified. Professor Brower also alleges that one government veterinarian who found radiation damage in the sheep was ordered to destroy his report before the court hearing.

The people of southern Utah are unusually trusting. Most are Mormons — conservative and patriotic, leading decent family-centred lives. They do not smoke or drink alcohol. There is no industry in the area. Their cancer rate used to be almost nonexistent. Yet, because the warning of those early sheep deaths was ignored, communities like St. George and Cedar City are suffering an unprecedented incidence of cancer.

There are no clear statistics, except for a recent dramatic finding by Dr. Joseph Lyon, of the University of Utah Medical School, that the incidence of childhood deaths from leukemia in southern Utah during the fall-out years was 2.4 times higher than usual.

In the immediate area of St. George it was 3.5 times higher.

11 in family died

It is harder to arrive at the adult statistics. So many young people move out of rural areas to work in cities. Typically, Jo Ann Taylor — now Mrs. Jo Ann Workman — lives in California. "I am not a Utah statistic," she remarked. "And hardly any of my classmates have remained in St. George."

Elmder Pickett, who owns the local hardware store, has lost 11 members of his immediate family to cancer — and he has had a thyroid tumor removed. "We never had a single case of cancer before," he said, "and until this happened most of my relatives lived into their nineties. Two of them turned a hundred."

Pickett's father and grandfather were the town's leading undertakers "and until the fall-out happened, cancer deaths were such a rarity in St. George that, when the first one happened in the fifties we had to look up our manuals to find out how to embalm the bodies."

Farmers appeal

He and Jo Ann Workman are among the civilians suing the U.S. government for massive compensation. Separate suits are being filed on behalf of hundreds of other cancer victims who, as soldiers, worked on the Nevada test range, or as engineers, in local uranium mines. Also, after 25 years, the sheep farmers' case is to go to appeal.

There is persuasive evidence on the side of the victims. Long-secret documents which their lawyers have obtained under the Freedom of Information Act indicate that by 1955 senior members of the Atomic Energy Commission had a very good idea of the health risk. But they disregarded them because, as one commissioner remarked, "We must not let anything interfere with this series of tests."

At the same closed meeting in February 1955, another commissioner observed that "People have to learn to live with the facts of life, and one of the facts is fall-out."

Jerry, the Happy Capitalist

By ELLEN GOODMAN
The Boston Globe

BOSTON — Once upon a time, in the mythical 1960s, Jerry Rubin looked into the media mirror and learned that he was the Yippiest of them all. In those wonderful yesteryears, when someone asked what he did for a living, he answered, "I'm famous. That's my job."

Well, Lord knows, this vocation has kept the lad busy.

Jerry Rubin has proved himself to be the Daddy Kravitz of the Sixties Kids. He has hustled himself with more consistent skill than a Harvard MBA.

First he made a living off The Movement, no mean feat in itself. He wrote books and made speeches about how kids should drop out and turn on, and "Do It!" He penned everybody's pet paranoid phrase, "Kill your parents."

Then he turned 30 and the 1960s turned into the 1970s. After a panicky moment or two of being passe, he moved right along into the Self-Searching Seventies. He was rolfed, ested, and massaged until he got in contact with his inner feelings. He also got in contact with a publisher who paid him to write about it all in Growing (Up).

But then the Self Biz hit the skids (life is not a bed of roses for The Human Trend) and the Seventies dropped like a stone into the Eighties. If the challenge of 1976 was to get in touch with your feelings, the feeling of 1980 is that you'd like to get in touch with some money.

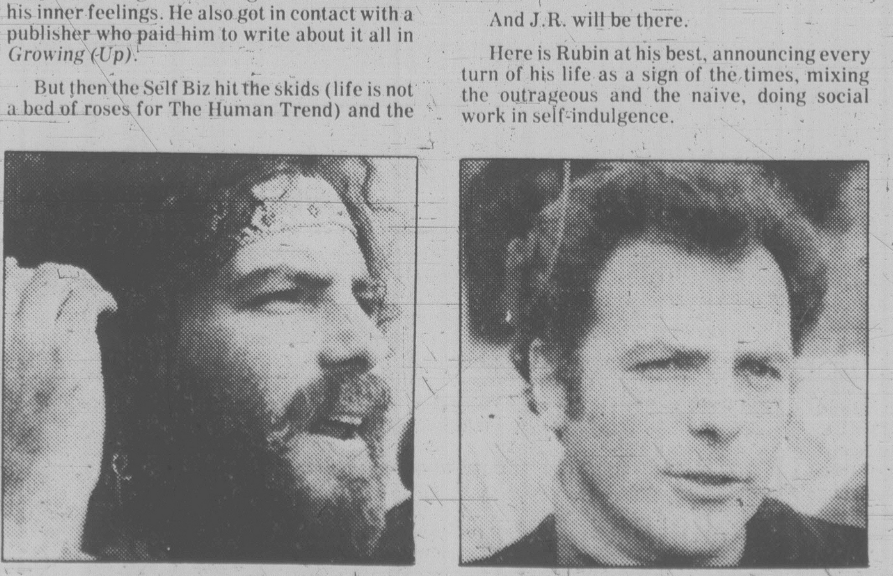
Rubin once again used the New York Times the way his more crass classmates use the alumni notes. He announced on its op-ed page: "I accepted a position on Wall Street this week."

In what was inadvertently a hilarious piece of journalism, he went on to say: "I know that I can be more effective today wearing a suit and tie and working on Wall Street than I can be dancing outside the walls of power . . . Politics and rebellion distinguished the '60s. The search for self characterized the spirit of the '70s. Money and financial interest will capture the passion of the '80s."

And J.R. will be there.

Here is Rubin at his best, announcing every turn of his life as a sign of the times, mixing the outrageous and the naive, doing social work in self-indulgence.



Rubin, then and now . . . only the outside changed

He is now a marketing analyst. But not your everyday marketing analyst. He is a consciousness-raised marketing analyst and self-certified good person ready to reach out and affect the system on his own terms.

To put it another way, he is now available to accept customers with a social conscience who are looking to invest their money in firms with a social conscience (not to mention a good profit picture) at John Muir and Co.

"Welcome, Wall Street, here I come! Let's make millions of dollars together supporting the little companies engaged in social environmental positivity. Let's rescue American capitalism from overemphasis on the huge organization. Let's make capitalism work for everyone."

Well, it is nice to know the man has retained his chutzpah inasmuch as he has lost his sense of humor. His job announcement is almost charming in its outlandish, childish sincerity.

Reading this, it is hard to believe that he was ever very "bad." It is easy, however, to believe that he was never very bright.

It took Rubin until he was 37 to come up with blazing banalities like: Hate is a very strong bond.

It took him until he was 41 to discover "Money is Power."

Now he has also "discovered" that "the challenge for American capitalism in the '80s is to bring the entrepreneurial spirit back to America."

This, at last, and at least, is a task that suits his talents. Through all the years of tripping the trends fantastic, Rubin has maintained a stunning consistency. He is now and always was the 100 per cent pure American archetype: The Happy Capitalist.

After all, he is the man who read Dale Carnegie for hints about how to perform on the radical-left platform and had $20,000 in the stock market when he was manning the barricades.

The lad has finally come home. Rubin's the name; Money and Fame's the game. YIPPEE!

Toronto

The Toronto stock market was up sharply in active mid-afternoon trading Thursday.

Advances outnumbered declines 253 to 159 with 210 issues unchanged.

Trading in shares of Basic Resources International S.A. was also halted at the opening pending an announcement and the stock last traded at $15¾.

Among industrials, Great Lakes Forest advanced 1⅝ to $57½, Falconbridge Nickel 1½ to $139, Seagram Co. 1⅜ to $68, Texasgulf 1¼ to $48¼ and Alberta Natural Gas 1 to $24½

Du Pont Canada A lost 1¼ to $28¾, R. L. Crain ¾ to $13, Canadian Foremost ⅝ to $12¾, Automotive Hardware A ½ to $10 and Dominion Citrus and Drugs 40 cents to $4.35.

Dome Mines gained 3⅛ to $126, Carolin Mines 2¼ to $20½ and Campbell Red Lake 2 to $65¼. Pine Point Mines fell 1⅛ to $38½ and Denison Mines ⅜ to $55¼.

Worldwide Energy rose 2¼ to $23⅛, United Canso Oil and Gas 1¼ to $23¼ and Bonanza Oil and Gas 1⅛ to $11⅝. Canadian Natural Resources slipped ¾ to $20¾ and Lochiel Explorations ½ to $7⅜.

Vancouver

Prices were up in heavy early trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Of the issues that traded, 50 posted gains, 26 were losers and 47 were unchanged.

Pacific Cypress Minerals was the centre of most of the action and gained .30 to $4.65 on 202,700 shares. Among other resource traders, Jubilee explorations gained a dime to .99 on 17,500 shares and Waddy Lake added .20 to $2.75 on 13,000.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led industrial issues and was unchanged at $6.75 on 8,180 shares. Taro Industries gained .15 to $4.90 on 2,900 shares and Balco Industries was steady at $7 on 900 shares.

Wildrose Petroleum paced curb traders and gained .09 to $1.15 on 14,000 shares. March Resources added a nickel to $2.45 on 5,000 shares and Maymac Exploration dropped a dime to $1.90 on 2,500 shares.

New York

Stock prices on the New York stock exchange rose in fairly active trading today as the blue chip issues rebounded a bit from recent losses.

Oil, electronics and data processing stocks were generally higher. But there were also signs of bargain hunting among secondary issues after the market's losses in the past two session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which dropped almost 15 points in the previous two sessions, was up 5.80 to 955.03 by 2 p.m.

Gaining issues outnumbered losers by a 2-to-1 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume was 31.20 million shares, as of two-thirds of the way through the trading session.

Pogo Producing, an offshore oil and gas development company, gained 1¼ to $24⅜ in active NYSE trading. Tesoro Petroleum gained 1½ to $25½ also in active trading.

Mesa Petroleum jumped 3⅜ to $50⅛ following Wednesday's announcement of a limited partnership with Texaco for oil and gas development. Texaco was up ⅜ to $37⅜.

London

The London stock market was mixed near the close of quiet trading Thursday.

The Financial Times index was up 0.7 to 475.3.

Industrials, golds and oils advanced.

Canadian shares were mixed.

JOHN BARKER Ph.D.

The appointment of Dr. John Barker to the position of research forester, Rayonier Canada, is announced by Rodger P. Manning, vice president, forest operations.

Dr. Barker's assignment is to develop a forestry research program for the company which has management responsibility for 404,740 hectares of forestland in B.C. He will be based at the company's Lost Lake Seed Orchard in Saanich, B.C.

Dr. Barker was born and educated in Vancouver, he is a forestry graduate of the University of British Columbia and earned his master's and doctorate in forestry at the University of California at Berkeley.

During the past 12 years, Dr. Barker lectured in forestry at the University of Canterbury, Christchurch, New Zealand, and for the two years prior to joining Rayonier, was associate professor of forestry at Lakehead University in Thunder Bay, Ontario.

He has published seven papers in forestry research in the area of silviculture and forest genetics.

NORTHERN INTERIOR LUMBER SECTOR

FOREST INDUSTRY ASSOCIATION MANAGER

The Northern Interior Lumber Sector of the Council of Forest Industries of B.C., representing the lumber industry in the northern half of B.C., requires a Manager.

This challenging position offers an excellent opportunity for a leadership role at the developing edge of forest industry affairs in such fields as forestry, transportation, market development, occupational safety and health, and quality control.

The job entails:
- Serving a variety of committees
- Policy analysis
- Government and industry liaison
- Public relations
- Administration
- Staff supervision

Proven initiative as well as excellent communication and human relations skills are required. A forestry degree and previous experience in association management and/or the B.C. forest industry are desirable.

Based in Prince George, this position requires some travel. Salary and benefits are competitive and a car is provided.

Send resume in strict confidence to:

First GNP drop since '54?

MONTREAL (CP) — The Royal Bank of Canada and the Bank of Montreal both predict in their latest economic reviews that Canada's real gross national product will fall this year for the first time since 1954.

The Royal Bank predicts a decline of 0.3 per cent and blames it on effects of the United States recession, which it says will linger longer and more deeply than earlier forecasts indicated.

"The downturn in the United States has intensified and Canada's economy is feeling the shock waves," says the August issue of Econoscope, released Wednesday by the Royal Bank, adding that merchandise exports are forecast to drop four per cent.

The Bank of Montreal has a gloomier prediction. The August issue of its Business Review says real GNP, adjusted to take account of inflation, seems likely to drop 1.2 per cent. The blame is attached to slumping auto production and the nosedive in housing starts.

Both banks predict a recovery in 1981. The Royal forecasts a rise of 2.5 per cent for the year as a whole, but the Bank of Montreal says the recovery will be "none too lusty."

Unlike previous recessions, Ottawa lacks the tools to stimulate the economy, the bank says.

"The federal government's already huge deficit position effectively precludes significant stimulative action," the Bank off Montreal said.

"In 1974-75, in contrast, the movement in the government's balance from a surplus position to a large deficit gave an important kick to the economy."

The Royal Bank is pessimistic about the U.S. economy and says tight monetary and credit controls are hurting growth prospects more than expected.

"The recovery next year (in the U.S.) will likely be slower than anticipated, particularly since the European and Japanese economies are expected to slow down in 1981," bank economists say.

"The steel industry in Canada, however, should be able to weather the storm well since high levels of activity in the machinery and industial goods industries will partially offset the reduced demand from the auto and construction industries."

Air Canada profit rebounds

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada has bounced back from a $5-million loss in the first quarter of 1980 with a $17.5-million profit in the three months ended June 30.

That's down from last year's second-quarter gain of $19.5 million and less than Air Canada management predicted, but results are satisfying considering how high fuel costs have jumped, the government-owned airline said Wednesday. Profit for the first half of 1980 totals $12.

Meanwhile, Canadian National Railways said Wednesday that lower shipments by the automobile and lumber industries pulled second-quarter profit down 31 per cent to $48.2 million, compared with $70.2 million a year earlier.

Boundary row flares up again

Attorney-General Allan Williams has confirmed a second member of the B.C. royal commission into electoral boundaries was told by a junior counsel for the commission that Deputy Premier Grace McCarthy apparently interfered in the drafting of the 1978 report.

But Williams said the statement by commission staffer Vi Barton could not be substantiated.

Ms. Barton was one of 40 persons interviewed by officials of the attorney-general's ministry during an investigation into allegations Mrs. McCarthy interfered in the re-drawing of electoral boundaries by commissioner Larry Eckardt to add a pocket of strong Social Credit support to her Vancouver-Little Mountain riding.

Gary Lauk (NDP — Vancouver-Centre) had asked Williams whether a comment by Ms. Barton in which she said junior counsel Susan Geisler told her "Grace McCarthy got to Eckardt" was in her statement of evidence.

Williams said the remark was checked out with Geisler and other members of the commission staff who were alleged to have been present, but it could not be substantiated.

The probe was begun after Florence Tamoto, a typist with the commission, said in sworn statement that Geisler told her a person identified as Grace "did, in a discussion with commissioner Eckardt, place her finger on a document and say 'change,' or words to that effect."

WILLIAMS
. . . grilled on report

However, in his report to Williams, deputy attorney-general Richard Vogel said he hadn't found any facts which support Ms. Tamoto's allegation. Mrs. Geisler also flatly denied the allegation.

Lauk, who has been grilling Williams on the report for four days, said he is concerned that Ms. Barton's comment was not included in Vogel's report.

Williams has refused to make available to the legislature transcripts of interviews by Vogel and ministry official Norm Prelypchan.

"There's got to be a reason why he's not releasing these interviews. I think those interviews reveal a serious impropriety — that's my strongest suspicion," Lauk said.

Questions about the Vogel report dominated much of the debate on Williams' ministerial estimates Wednesday.

NDP leader Dave Barrett accused the attorney-general of hiding the transcripts, saying: "Unless I see those transcripts myself I don't believe a word of the interpretation of that report by this government."

All the fun of the fair

A livestock competition, and cooking, sewing and crafts booths will be featured at the 71st annual Shawnigan-Cobble Hill Fall Fair on Saturday.

The event takes place in the Farmers' Institute Hall and fairgrounds at 3550 Watson Avenue, Cobble Hill.

Home loan restriction removed

The B.C. government has introduced an amendment to the Home Purchase Assistance Act which would eliminate a stipulation that persons receiving a grant or loan under the act be required to live in their home for a minimum of one year.

In the past, anyone who moved out of his home within the year had to repay the grant.

Housing Minister Jim Chabot said it was felt that the section was outdated in an age of high mobility.

"We feel that in view of the fact, that it's a once-only grant for the first home that there's no problem in removing the eligibility," he said.

Moratorium appears lifted on uranium mining in B.C.

The B.C. government is apparently relaxing the seven-year moratorium on uranium mining and exploration that it imposed in February.

An amendment to the Mines Act — quietly slipped onto the order paper by Energy Minister Bob McClelland earlier this week — appears to give the chief mining inspector the right to allow the reopening of a mine shut down by the moratorium or the resumption of exploration and development.

The Mines Act has yet to reach committee stage and third reading debate.

The amendment states that where exploration or development is prohibited or a mining operation is closed by regulation, the chief inspector "may consent, on conditions ordered by him, to the recommencement of exploration or development or the opening of a mining operation that has been closed under that regulation."

McClelland denied that it will mean the reopening of uranium mines, saying that as long as the "threshhold" — a prescribed amount of uranium ore — is there, the uranium can't be mined.

"But you might find a large property in which there's uranium, but 100 feet down in the same property there is some other kind of mineral ore, then the chief inspector can say 'you move over and mine molybdenum or whatever it is,' " he said.

However, the Mines Act does not stipulate what constitutes a uranium mine, nor does the order-in-council establishing the moratorium, says NDP energy critic Chris D'Arcy.

D'Arcy said his reading of the amendment shows that it clearly allows the government to exempt a mine from the exploration and mining moratorium.

"If it doesn't, then I don't know what it's in there for," he said. "There's loopholes big enough to drive a couple of drilling rigs through."

D'Arcy said he also is concerned that the amendment putting the moratorium — made by an order-in-council — into legislation does not mention the seven-year term.

Nursing home fire drill claim 'an error'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Hospital Employees Union spokesman says a typographical error was to blame for an NDP MLA's erroneous assertion that few nursing homes in B.C. are staging monthly fire drills as required by provincial regulations.

Dennis Cocke, New Westminster MLA and health critic, told the legislature Monday that only five of 631 nursing homes in B.C. are complying with the regulation.

Jean Swanson, whose union prepared the report on which Cocke's statement was based, said Cocke, or one of his researchers must have made the error because the number should be 50 per cent, not five.

Cocke retracted the statement in the legislature Tuesday and presented the accurate one.

Attorney-General Allan Williams, minister in charge of the fire marshal's department, said he would find out what steps his department is taking to ensure nursing homes are complying with the law and report back to the legislature.

Fire safety knowledge lacking

The $100,000 fire at a Vic West highrise Wednesday morning points out a glaring deficiency in public knowledge of fire safety procedures in large apartment blocks, Victoria deputy fire chief Fred Severson said today.

He said an investigation into the blaze in a basement locker room at the Princess Patricia apartments at 701 Esquimalt found:

— Fire doors had been left open allowing pungent smoke to permeate extensively through seven floors of the 13-storey building.

— Tenants had delayed reporting the fire because they wrongly assumed the alarm bells activated by the smoke and fire were automatically relayed to the fire station.

— The apartment owners were in the process of upgrading the fire alarm system and it is possible the alarm may not have sounded on every floor.

Severson said several precious minutes elapsed before the fire was reported. One tenant complained it took firemen 11 minutes to arrive after the alarm bells went off. But Severson said the first trucks arrived four minutes after the fire was reported at 2:06 a.m.

He said that despite an abundance of signs and posters informing tenants the alarm was only local — meaning it sounded just within the building — many of the residents had apparently assumed it was hooked up to city fire halls.

While some buildings, notably area hospitals and the Legislative Buildings complex, have direct links, this is not the case with apartment buildings, Severson said.

A few go through a telephone answering service which monitors alarms and reports them to the fire department. But most have only local alarms.

Severson said the fire department's inspection team is constantly reminding apartment managers of the limitations of their fire alarm systems. But the message isn't always getting through to tenants.

He said prompt reports are essential to cut loss and reduce the risk of injury.

The deputy also emphasized the need to keep fire doors shut at all times.

"What we'd like to impress on people is to close any doors they find open," he said.

Severson said the alarm system in the Princess Patricia may not have worked on every floor because of the new system being put in, but considered it unlikely all tenants would not have been alerted.

The bells, which continue to ring as long as there is smoke or fire present, may have contributed to several firemen being overcome with smoke as they led tenants to safety.

Severson said the noise may have drowned out the sound of the bell on the firemen's masks which start ringing when the air supply gets low.

Several firemen required treatment at the scene and three — Fred Beadle, 35, Stuart Hemmings, 26, and Hans Rudwaleit, 40 — were hospitalized.

Sidney blood clinic tops 200 target

The Red Cross blood donor clinic held in Sidney Wednesday attracted 204 donors, spokesman Gerry Savage said today.

The agency had set a goal of 200 pints for the clinic, organized by the Sidney Rotary Club.

A clinic was held today in Sooke and another will be staged Friday at Victoria Press between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m.

The Red Cross has boosted its target for this week to 1,325 pints across the province.

In B.C., 2,600 pints of blood are needed every week, and the Red Cross is constantly faced with the threat of shortages, according to Savage.

The organization is still trying to make up for a 200 pint shortfall in May and June.

NATIONAL ENERGY BOARD

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

'PROPOSED NORMAN WELLS OIL PIPELINE PROJECT'

Interprovincial Pipe Line (NW) Ltd. has applied to the National Energy Board for authorization to construct and operate an oil pipeline extending from Norman Wells in the Northwest Territories to Zama, Alberta, and for the approval of the form and content of the rates, tolls and tariffs for that pipeline.

The National Energy Board will conduct a public hearing of the application to obtain information and to hear the relevant views of interested persons, groups, organizations and companies. The hearing will start with the section of the application for authorization to construct and operate the proposed pipeline.

The hearing will open in Edmonton, Alberta, on Tuesday, 7 October, 1980, at 9:30 a.m. local time, in the Regency Ballroom of the Regency Motor Hotel, 75 Steet and Argyll Road, and will continue in October at other times and places, including locations in the Northwest Territories, to be announced later. It will be conducted in either English or French and simultaneous interpretation will be provided should a party to the proceedings request this service in a written submission.

Any party who intends to participate in the hearing must file with the Board a written submission, in either English or French, which may admit or deny any or all of the statements contained in the application. The submission must state:

(1) the nature of the party's interest in the application,
(2) the name and address of the interested party or that of his lawyer to whom communications may be sent,
(3) whether he wishes to use English or French at the hearing, and
(4) whether he wishes to receive a copy of the entire application or any particular part of it.

Thirty (30) copies of the submission and any supporting information must be delivered to the Secretary of the Board in Ottawa no later than 19 September, 1980. Three (3) copies must be delivered no later than 26 September, 1980, to Interprovincial Pipe Line (NW) Ltd. c/o John Ballem Esq., Q.C., Ballem, McDill and MacInnes, 3600 Scotia Centre, 700 Second Street, S.W., Calgary, Alberta, T2P 2W2, and one (1) copy to each of the following: the Attorneys General of the Provinces of British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec, the Commissioner of the Yukon Territory, the Commissioner of the Northwest Territories, the British Columbia Energy Commission, the Alberta Energy Resources Conservation Board, the Oil and Natural Gas Conservation Board of Manitoba, the Ontario Energy Board, and on all other parties who have filed submissions. A list of those parties will be distributed by the Board on 23 September, 1980. At the opening of the hearing, the Board will require written proof that the submission and any supporting documents have been served on the parties listed above.

A copy of the Board's order setting out details of the procedures for the hearing may be obtained by writing to the Secretary of the Board in Ottawa at the address below or by telephoning 613-992-5506 and requesting a copy of Board Order PO-1-OH-2-80.

Armed post office police proposed to cut mail thefts

he said.

Envelopes containing donations to charities constitute a particularly vulnerable target.

Most serious crimes involve thefts directly from the mail or "mail depredations," Foster said. There were 379 such cases reported in the Western postal region in the year ending March 31, 1980.

There were also 162 robberies, mostly burglaries of small post offices; 164 cases of illegal use of the mails; 164 money order irregularities valued at about $30,000; 302 cases of theft from mailboxes and 289 other crimes, including fraud, theft of post office property, damage, arson, bomb threats and sabotage.

One of the most costly crimes, estimated at $300,000 in B.C. and the Yukon during the last four years, is theft of packages including bank shipments, gold bullion, negotiable bonds and cash.

During the wide-ranging hearing Wednesday, post office security men also said they have been having trouble interesting RCMP and municipal police in a series of money order frauds which have spread across Western Canada.

They said the thefts, which involve alteration of amounts on money order slips, have been going on for seven years. But because they involve relatively small amounts — the largest $200 — the cases have low priority.

Tom McDougall, lawyer for unions representing the post office's 60,000 employees, compared the difference in treatment afforded supervisors involved in shady dealings with that given other employees.

When former Vancouver plant manager Guenter Raedler resigned in 1978 after using discarded material worth an estimated $5,000 for his house, senior post office management overruled a security proposal that he be prosecuted, Foster said.

Pachyderm amid the potted

THE BENGAL BAR

Balderson shows drawings of renovated bar . . . the Bengal Room reds will go

The famous Bengal Room bar in The Empress has a real tiger skin mounted above the fireplace.

Now it's going to be joined by a life-size elephant.

The pachyderm is part of a $500,000 package of renovations to the public areas of the 75-year-old CPR hotel.

Manager Ted Balderson says the elephant will be in the middle of the room where the canopy now is. It will become the bar for the Bengal Room with bartenders working under the beast. Drinkers will be able to sit at a dozen stools around the elephant.

"It'll still be the Bengal Room but we'll get rid of the reds in there," says Balderson.

Other changes in the hotel include redecoration of the Garden Cafe in the basement, the lobby and Crystal Ballroom. Work will start late in October and continue to Christmas.

"All of these areas haven't been touched since 1968-69," says Balderson.

There will be new drapes for the Crystal Ballroom and a new color scheme.

"The general tone of the room will be blue."

The tearoom which is a foyer for the ballroom will be spruced up. The stained glass dome which collapsed in 1969 isn't to be repaired but Balderson has some old-style light fixtures.

"We've got hold of some beautiful chandeliers from the Royal Alex Hotel in Winnipeg."

The basement coffee shop will be improved with the addition of more plants and intimate areas.

The renovations are part of the Empress' major facelift expected to cost a total of $4 million. By the spring of 1983 all work on the 116-room hotel should be completed, Balderson says.

Bloated air fares lashed by Steele

Airwest Airlines needs competition to keep its fares in check, Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Cedric Steele said today.

"They have a monopoly and the fares just go up and up."

The current rate between Victoria and Vancouver is $80 for a round-trip, twice the cost of the jetfoil service between Victoria and Seattle, which is about the same distance, Steele said.

"There is a growing concern in Victoria about Airwest's rates. Perhaps it needs some competition."

Vancouver businessman Jim Pattison bought Airwest Airlines in March, 1979. It subsequently purchased its only competitor, West Coast Air Services Ltd.

At this time last year Airwest's return fare was $56. Since then, Pattison has increased it 43 per cent in 12 months.

Steele said the jetfoil operating between Victoria and Seattle should be diverted to the Victoria-Vancouver run to provide competition for Airwest.

He said there should also be consideration given to running a jetfoil between Victoria and Nanaimo because of Airwest's decision to end float plane service between the two cities.

On the Victoria-Vancouver run, the jetfoil would take about two hours each way from downtown to downtown on a $40 return fare. Airwest takes a little over half an hour and the rate is $80.

Steele, acting as an individual, helped to get the jetfoil service established this spring but now plays no role in the Flying Princess Transportation Co., which operates the vessel.

"The chamber is asking the provincial government to bring back the Marguerite, or a cruise ship like her, for the Victoria-Seattle route. With the Marguerite we would not need the jetfoil to Seattle, or possibly only one trip a day.

"It would be available for the Vancouver service where it might fill a greater need."

In a separate development, the Flying Princess Transportation Company announced it will extend its three-trips daily jetfoil service between Victoria and Seattle to Oct. 1. It had been scheduled to end Sept. 15.

The company said traffic has been icreasing steadily and a brisk, late tourist season is expected.

The company also announced it has applied to the provincial government to begin a four-cities jetfoil service on a trial basis beginning Oct. 1.

The jetfoil would leave Seattle about 6 a.m. and go to Victoria. Then it would head to Vancouver. From there it would make a trip to Nanaimo.

From Nanaimo it would retrace its route to Vancouver, Victoria and Seattle, ending the day before dark.

Meanwhile, the Victoria Princess ferry operates one trip daily between Victoria and Seattle. She is finished on Oct. 6.

Youth injured in trestle fall

A 17-year-old is in fair condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital after falling off the Esquimalt & Nanaimo Railway trestle at Hereward Road in Victoria West early today.

Lawrence Hamilton, 821 Rockheights, received head injuries in the 20-foot fall.

City police said the youth apparently was walking home along the tracks when the accident happened at about 12:30 a.m.

Municipal okay on police pact

Municipal representatives Wednesday endorsed a proposed contract settlement with the police of Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt.

The new contract will be considered by police today in their own separate ratification vote.

Details of the contract have not been released, except that it is a standard agreement covering all four municipalities. Until this year, each police force bargained on its own with municipal employers.

Mel Couvelier, chairman of the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association, said the vote was difficult for some of the members and came only after two meetings this week.

"In any event, the settlement has now been ratified by the association and the association will stand behind that ratification," he said.

The 190 policemen in Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt have staged a limited strike since July 9 to protest delays in the collective bargaining process.

Without a contract since last December, the police have refused to wear their uniforms and have taken other measures which will mean increased overtime when the work-to-rule protest ends.

Why expect reward?

Honesty itself was its own reward after an 11-year-old boy found a wallet containing $116 in the McKenzie Mall at McKenzie and Quadra Wednesday night.

Darrin Ritchie of 3840 Epsom didn't think twice about taking it to the Saanich police station. His timing was perfect.

While there Grant Forster of Nanaimo arrived to report his loss.

Was there a cash reward?

Well, not exactly Darrin's mother Mrs. John Ritchie said today. Although there could be something. Forster did take down Darrin's address.

"We'd like to think there are lots of things you can do in life without expecting a reward in it," she said.

Have you room for a student?

Thousands of University of Victoria students are beginning the annual rush for accommodation despite a city-wide apartment vacancy rate of zero.

"To put it mildly, the situation is grim," says Shirley Baker, UVic's associate director of student services.

She calculates that 5,600 of the 8,000 returning students require rental accommodation.

"Many of them have already made their arrangements but there are hundreds who are still looking."

Only 900 of them can live on campus and those spots are already taken. The residences have a waiting list of about 1,000 more.

UVic's off-campus housing committee has launched a vigorous campaign for rooms of all types: housekeeping, sleeping, sharing — anything that's available.

"When we began the search we were afraid we would find nothing at all. But then calls began to come in and we are encouraged that we might come close to meeting the need."

Baker said almost 700 off-campus places have been found. Another 300 to 400 are needed.

"We are often asked how many students decide not to return to university because they can't find a place to live — and frankly we don't know. We hope it won't be many this year."

She encouraged anyone with space to phone 477-6911 and ask for Housing Services.

In addition to the space shortage, there is the problem of costs. Rents have soared because of the heavy demand, especially in units not covered by rent controls.

"Some students are not going to be able to afford these rents," Baker said.

The problem is more acute in Victoria than in most cities because the vacancy rate here is nil and 70 per cent of the UVic students are from out of town.

By contrast, at University of Toronto, where housing officials have expressed alarm about their accommodation shortage, the city vacancy rate is 1.5 per cent and only 23 per cent of the students are from out of town.

The student housing shortage is severe at the University of B.C. and Simon Fraser because the apartment vacancy rate on the Lower Mainland is virtually nil.

BOATING SAFETY is serious business and Derek Sidenius told his girls Sarah (with the oars), 11, and Katharine, 8, they must wear life preservers whenever they use the family yacht, believed to be a 1942 Homebilt with a unique flake finish. Although Sidenius had warned no exceptions would be tolerated he was nonetheless startled when he looked out the window of his Shawnigan Lake home and saw Woody, the family pooch, safely clad in Sidenius' own preserver.

Whale fight overdone but laudable: biologist

University of B.C. marine biologist Tim Parsons won't support Greenpeace but he agrees the whale-savers have a laudable aim.

"They (Greenpeace members) tend to exaggerate their case," says Parsons.

He commented during a break at an international symposium on ocean research enclosures being held this week at the Pat Bay Institute of Ocean Sciences.

The enclosures have been used to study pollutants and the lower end of the marine food chain, in which whales are at the upper limit.

Parsons has been involved since the beginning of the study which uses enclosed ecosystem plastic sea bags suspended in Saanich Inlet.

He concedes that Greenpeace is correct in its stand against the killing of whales since nearly everything useful from the whale can be synthesized by modern methods.

While Greenpeace plays an important, dramatic role in this struggle, Parsons said, it's one scientists cannot play for fear of losing their credibility.

Parsons also takes issue with another Greenpeace tactic — its vigorous opposition to the capture of killer whales for display in public aquariums.

"There is no better way to illustrate to the public the value and beauty of these creatures, especially to children, than to have them on display."

On the positive side, Parsons noted Greenpeace is making some effort at research, a useful role for the ecological watchdog organization.

"I think they may mature into an alternative for government research in studies of ecology and habitats," Parsons said.

Parsons doesn't hesitate to differ with others he believes are overstating their case — such as Jacques Cousteau and Thor Heyerdahl who have been alarmist in predicting the death of the oceans.

He said programs like the Controlled Ecosystem Pollution Experiment — CEPEX — have shown it is unlikely that pollutants will cause ocean deserts devoid of life even though some areas may produce some species which are chemically altered.

"If man is around, the products of his society are going to get into the environment."

Short of eliminating man, there is as yet no way to dispose of these wastes other than by land or sea and the sea is a useful recipient which has been absorbing man's wastes for centuries.

"The question is where it should be allowed," Parsons said.

Obviously there are parts of the ocean which are highly productive and should not be disturbed by man's dumping.

Howe Sound and similar fjords and inlets along the B.C. coast are among the places where dumping should be banned, Parsons believes.

But he says the Strait of Georgia, deplored by some as a dumping ground, actually flushes itself well.

Half the water contained by the strait moves out every 18 months compared with 35 years for the natural flushing of the Baltic Sea.

Ocean chemist Dr. C.S. Wong, of the IOS, said most dumping in the Strait of Georgia is of natural material like dredge spoils from the Fraser River and navigable channels in the estuary.

Parsons said he sees nothing wrong with that kind of dumping since all that that is happening is that the natural sedimentation of Georgia Strait, washed down by the Fraser, is speeded up.

The harmful things are heavy metals and petroleum derivatives which in concentration kill or alter sea life. Much of that kind of pollutant comes out of sewers serving the Lower Mainland.

But one thing the CEPEX experiments have shown is that heavy metals in compounds can produce complex reactions with seawater, not all of which are harmful.

Parsons said the symposium was designed partly to look back and assess technology and progress in the 10 years of research employing water column enclosures.

Calgary centre called success — only $1.5M in red every year

Mayor Ross Alger of Calgary said here Wednesday his city's convention centre has been a smashing success — it only loses $1.5 million a year.

As convention centres go that's good, he told a Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce public meeting at The Empress.

The building attracts 25,000 delegates a year who spend upwards of $9 million, creating an annual profit for the business community of $7.5 million.

Operating losses in Calgary are covered by one percentage point on the 11 per cent business tax.

The Calgary convention centre was one of the first in Canada, having been built in 1971.

Now every city has one or will soon get one.

Edmonton is building a huge convention hall which will seat 5,000 for banquets and 7,000 for meetings. It will be ready in 1982. The Calgary centre seats 1,700 for meals, 2,500 for meetings.

Centres are also planned in Victoria, Vancouver, Toronto, Hamilton, Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec City and two in the Maritimes.

ALGER
. . . deficit inevitable

"They are in fashion," Alger said.

He did not comment directly on the proposed Victoria centre but he did have some advice for local planners.

The main thing is to prepare for a deficit because it's inevitable.

Also, make allowances for expansion, he said. When the Calgary centre was constructed it would have cost $250,000 for additional offices. Planners decided that was too expensive so they weren't built.

Now the offices are needed and the bill will be more than $1 million.

The Calgary convention centre cost $9 million. This includes $500,000 for land, $6.5 million for construction and almost $2 million for equipment.

The money came from $4 million in civic funds plus $5 million in borrowed money.

The one percentage point on the business tax raised only about $400,000 at first, not enough to cover the $1.5 million deficit. But as the city grew, the tax revenue increased and now that tax point is worth $2.5 million a year.

Unfortuately, the money goes into general city revenues and not into the convention centre so the annual surplus of $1 million from the business tax is not available to pay off the $5 million debt.

"I hope you won't make the same mistake."

The Calgary centre has an agreement with the Four Seasons Hotel, which is adjacent to it.

The hotel provides all liquor and food concessions. The convention centre gets 15 per cent of the food revenues but cannot claim a share of liquor revenues because of provincial regulations.

By contrast, the 2,700-seat Jubilee auditorium is empty except on special occasions. Alger said a daily use for any convention centre must be devised or it will not fully benefit the city.

Businessmen vote backed

Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Cedric Steele Wednesday defended provincial government legislation that would allow businessmen to vote in municipal elections wherever they operate a business.

Steele said the legislation simply extends to renters the same rights enjoyed by property owners.

Under the Municipal Act, he said, a person can vote in the municipality where he lives and also in another municipality where he owns property.

Under the new legislation a person would be able to vote in a municipality where he rents property for business purposes.

Critics, he said, talk about one person, one vote. But there is also a guiding principle of no taxation without representation and people renting property to carry out a business are entitled to vote in the municipality where they pay business taxes.

See the city for $1.25

Transit for tourists will get a promotion push from the Urban Transit Authority and the Capital Regional District.

Fifty thousand leaflets have been printed for distribution on the ferries, at hotels and motels and information centres.

They tell visitors how to see Victoria on $1.25 a day, with the new daily bus pass.

The leaflet lists 38 tourist destinations — the commercial spots as well as those with free admission — and the buses which serve them.

There's "our fabulous Provincial Museum. Our romantic stone castle. The stately grounds of Government House. (Where the Queen stays if she's in town.)"

The UTA-CRD joint effort boasts first class travel on the systems buses.

Before the judge

A 19-year-old man described as borderline retarded was sentenced in provincial court Wednesday to a 10-month term depsite protests from his lawyer that something other than jail was needed.

The man, who had lived in a home for the retarded, pleaded guilty Aug. 6 to three theft-related charges, including one involving an automobile. The offences took place a month after the man had been released from custody on a February conviction.

He had been remanded in custody so a pre-sentence report could be prepared for Judge Harold Alder.

Defence counsel Barry Mah Ming criticized the pre-sentence report's conclusion that jail was the only alternative for the accused.

Mah Ming said he couldn't accept that, considering the amount of money spent on human resources and corrections in the province.

He proposed his client return to the home and the program he was in at the time he committed the latest offences.

Alder said it was a difficult case because it involved the people whose duty is to find therapeutic treatment, and those who must enforce the law. He said he had to consider the accused and the community.

He sentenced the man to 10 months for the car theft and six months each on the other two charges. All will be served concurrently at the Stave Lake Forestry Camp.

An unemployed 18-year-old was jailed 10 days after he failed to comply with a probation order to pay for several broken windows.

Rodney Thomas, 245 Wilson, still must pay the $150 owing the owner of an Esquimalt Road apartment block where he broke several windows last February.

Thomas pleaded guilty March 19 to a wilful damage charge and was given a suspended sentence plus nine months probation. The terms of his probation required him to pay for the windows by June 30. Thomas applied for and received a one month's extension but still failed to pay for the windows.

A Saanichton man who decided a taxi was too expensive after police ordered him off the road on July 25 found provincial court even more costly.

Frederick Roberts, 30, was fined $400 and $200 respectively after he pleaded guilty to impaired driving and driving while suspended.

Roberts was spotted driving only an hour after he had been given a roadside suspension and a cab had been called to take him home.

The court was told that Roberts had intended to take the cab for what he expected would be a $15-$20 tab. He changed his mind when the driver told him it would be three times what the meter said.

Darrell Pelkey, 34, of 507 Forward, was fined $100 for drinking and driving.

Ransom Fund studies ad ban

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A local anti-abortion group which offers to "buy" unborn fetuses says it is not sure whether it will be affected by proposed legislation which would outlaw advertisements for the adoption of children.

The group, Babies Ransom Fund, placed newspaper ads earlier this year offering "hard-earned cash to buy the life of a fetus." The ads offered financial help to women before and after their babies' births to encourage them to carry their children to term.

Director John Welscher said Wednesday the group is studying the implications of the legislation, a proposed amendment to the Adoption Act which would ban ads for the adoption of children under threat of a maximum fine of $10,000.

The ransom fund's intent is to save fetuses, not make money, Welscher said.

Many expectant mothers responded to the ads and all but one of them decided to keep their babies after birth.

Amendments to the act would also make it an offence to either offer or accept money or a consideration of any kind to induce a person to make a child available for adoption.

Candu foe dies at 81

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lille d'Easum, founder and leader of the B.C. branch of the Canadian Coalition for Nuclear Responsibility, died Wednesday at the age of 81.

After retiring as an English teacher in Vancouver, she became a prominent opponent against development of Canada's Candu reactor. She was a charter member of the Greenpeace Foundation.

She was nationally known through her published articles on the dangers of nuclear power.

It will be fine soccer, but why no local reps?

No one will argue that there should be some pretty exciting soccer seen when the new national select-team championship for the Schreyer Cup gets under way Friday night at Royal Athletic Park.

It's just a shame, though, that Victorians paying for a seat won't get a chance to watch many local lads in action and it smacks somewhat of a revival of the old Vancouver-Victoria petty jealousy thing.

Saying they won't see "many" is a gross understatement, in fact. There's only one Victorian on the whole B.C. Select team for the weekend tourney and even he doesn't live here! Former Reynolds High School student Eric Jones, now living in Vancouver where he's in his fourth year studying physical education at UBC, is the honored Islander.

Oh, they were so gracious as to include Victoria's Russ Rimmer as an alternative but even he is based over in Vancouver attending Simon Fraser University.

So what's happened to all the other promising young athletes in the City of Gardens, long regarded (at least by us) as the soccer and rugby stronghold of Canada?

Well, say the decision-making Vancouver officials with a shrug, Victoria West is training hard to defend its national club title early in September and made it known its players weren't available for the B.C. Selects.

Sounds reasonable. The Wests are working hard for the Western Canada tournament in Saskatoon Aug.22 to 24 and, hopefully, a berth in the Dominion Cup national final in Halifax, Nova Scotia, Sept. 13 to 15. They got past Columbus of Vancouver to take the Province Cup and would dearly like to retain the national crown they won in Victoria last year.

Okay, so the Vic West players don't want to play this weekend. Fine. But why rule out everyone else on this side of the water? And to say merely that it's summer . . . and no one's training . . . and people are hard to find with holidays and everything . . . is pretty weak.

As Art Shaw, a Victoria member of the B.C. Soccer Commission, points out Vic West is only one of eight teams on the Island that are all comparable in standard and many of their players would have been keen to try out for the Selects.

No doubt the team, which meets Ontario at 2 p.m. on Saturday (Manitoba plays New Brunswick at 8 Friday night and the two winners meet in the championship final at 1:15 p.m. Sunday) will perform well and could even bring the Schreyer Cup to B.C.

(This new championship, incidentally, is one the Canadian Soccer Association hopes will revive interest in inter-provincial competition that waned somewhat after some crook made off with the Connaught Cup in Montreal in 1975. It hasn't been seen since — except by the crook — and so the Schreyer Cup was born. It is said to have cost $5,000 but Art Shaw, who has it sitting on his dining room table this week, says it looks a pretty ordinary trophy to him and adds that he wouldn't have minded getting the contract to provide it for that price!).

The B.C. team for this weekend's tourney is basically the one that battled through 95-degree temperatures last summer to win the gold medal at the Canada Games in Saskatoon. So no one is really arguing about its quality.

All we're saying is, for local fan interest and for the sake of the youngsters here who must see that somewhere there is something at the end of their soccer rainbow, it's just a pity there weren't a few more Victorians on the side.

Shaw agrees. "We feel that the Island produces more than its share of fine soccer players and therefore should have a bigger representation on provincial sides. Unfortunately, the people in Vancouver don't always see it that way. "In getting this team together, I think there's been a slip up in communication somewhere. It's an unfortunate situation that won't happen again, I promise you!"

Tonight in sports

Baseball, softball and harness racing are on the sports program tonight for fans in Greater Victoria.

Baseball fans get a choice between watching the Victoria Blues play Eugene Emeralds in their Noerthwest League game at 7 at Royal Athletic Park and the Cosmopolitan Senior Amateur League play-off final series which continues at 6 at Lambrick Park.

In softball, playoffs continue in all league at 6:30 with Victoria-Saanich Women's League action at Hyacinth Park, senior "C" district playoffs at Heywood Avenue Park, Stuffy McGinnis Men's League games at Central Park and Macdonald Men's League games at Macdonald Park.

And for harness racing fans, there's a nine-race program out at Sandown Raceway starting at 5:30.

Rocks snatch series lead

By BILL WALKER

It gets a little sickening after you've seen the act a few times, but at least the Western Lacrosse Association semi-final between Victoria Shamrocks and Vancouver Burrards is going according to the script.

When Burrards are ahead at game's end, all's right with the world. When they are behind, fans get to see the Ward Sanderson show with sidelights.

It was ever thus at Memorial Arena Wednesday night as the Rocks edged Burrards 13-12 in overtime to take a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series which continues tonight in Kerrisdale.

This performance of the war of attrition between the two clubs ended with a fight between Ron Pinder of Burrards and Art Webster of the Shamrocks and Sanderson stalking the floor in his role as the Great Intimidator looking for a likely victim.

Fortunately, cooler heads prevailed and Sanderson was kept at bay until the game officials, Wayne Frank and Ron Masson, could make peace between Pinder and Webster.

Before then, it had been a good, hard-hitting affair, as is so often the case between these two clubs. And it was well officiated for the most part except for a couple of strange calls in the third period which went against the Rocks.

Burrard goals resulted each time and helped Vancouver come back from a 10-6 deficit to tie the score at 10 and force extra time.

Jim Boyd turned out to be the hero of the evening and why not? Earlier the Shamrock rookie had held his own with Sanderson in a more of a holding match than a fight. Then in the extra time, he fired two goals to give the Rocks the lead while another first-year man, Paul Michael, made it 13-10.

Burrards came back to get close, scoring the final goal after the buzzer, but they counted it anyway.

A total of 100 minutes in penalties was handed out, 51 minutes to Vancouver.

"It would have been brutal if we'd given that one away," said Shamrock Chris Hall.

With Smeltzer playing another standout game in the nets, the Rocks led 4-2 after one period and 8-5 after two.

Dan Perrault, who was the only thorn in Smeltzer's side with five goals, scored at 3:15 of the third period to make it 8-6 but Kevin Alexander and Hall replied for the Irish and it was 10-6 with 12 minutes to play.

Then came a couple of questionable calls by Frank which aided Burrards.

He called Hall for pushing the ball back to Smeltzer in the crease when Smeltzer never touched the ball and awarded the ball to Perrault who scored almost immediately. Only seconds later, he called the Shamrocks (Alexander was breaking out of the Shamrock gate) for too many men on the floor and Perrault scored on the odd-man play.

Alexander had two goals and four assists, Hall scored two goals and Dave Lowden, Rick Baker, Tarey Pollock and Rhys Wickes added singles for Victoria.

Doug Hayes scored twice for Vancouver and John Swan, Mike Smith, Eric Otterstrom, Stu Aird and Pinder had singles.

Smeltzer stopped 36 shots, including eight in overtime, while Dave Evans and Brian Celli combined to stop 26 for Vancouver.

Shamrocks had captain Larry Bell back in uniform. He was wearing a special support for the wrist he injured a week ago. On the sidelines were Bill Marechek (shoulder) and Scott Browning (leg).

Bruce Turris, who was carried off the floor on a stretcher after being checked into the boards late in the game, suffered only a minor shoulder injury and is expected to play for Burrards tonight.

Eskimos jump on Brock; Marler dazzling for Cats

Times News Services

Edmonton Eskimos jumped out to a 27-3 lead and then coasted to a 30-17 victory over the Winnipeg Blue Bombers in a Canadian Football League game in Winnipeg Wednesday.

The Eskimos, who dominated the first three quarters of play, extended their record to 5-0 to remain in first place in the Western Football Conference. The Bombers slipped to 1-4 and are in last place.

Edmonton got touchdowns from Neil Lumsden, Joe Hollimon and Jim Germany. Dave Cutler converted all three touchdowns and kicked field goals of 16, 31 and 37 yards.

Winnipeg scored its two touchdowns late in the fourth quarter as quarterback Dieter Brock found Robert Woods and Mike Holmes in the end zone. He also combined with Holmes for a two-point convert. Trevor Kennerd added a 36-yard field goal to complete the Bombers scoring.

Winnipeg coach Ray Jauch said matter-of-factly that his club was beaten by a superior team.

"They put the force right on us," he said. "We didn't get things picked up until right later on in the ball game.

"The pressure they exerted on us was probably the thing that got to us more than anything else."

Much of that pressure came from the Eskimos pass rush. Brock, who completed 24 of 45 passing attempts for 317 yards, was sacked eight times and forced to rush his passes on several other occasions.

Edmonton defensive end Ron Estay said getting to Brock was the key to the Edmonton victory.

A 60-yard pass from starting quarterback Tom Wilkinson, who completed six of 11 passes for 91 yards, to Brian Kelly set up Cutler's first field goal. Before the first quarter ended Riggie Pierson intercepted a Wilkinson pass at the Eskimos 39 yard line, and Kennerd subsequently evened the score, connecting from the 36 yard line.

Edmonton came to life halfway through the second quarter after Warren Moon took over from Wilkinson at quarterback. On his first offensive series he marched the Eskimos 55 yards for a touchdown as he sent Lumsden in on a third-down play from the Bombers two yard line.

In Toronto, Dave Marler, Hamilton's second year pro, turned in a dazzling performance in a relief role in leading the Tiger-Cats to an 18-16 victory over the Argonauts.

Marler directed the Hamilton attack to 23 first downs and 340 yards of offence. Over-all he was good on 19 of 34 passes for 240 yards.

He directed the Ticats on two touchdown-scoring drives and had two others stalled when he was intercepted deep in Argo territory.

The victory enabled Hamilton to move into a three-way tie with Toronto and Ottawa Rough Riders atop the Eastern Football Conference. Each club has six points.

Borg okay, but McEnroe out

TORONTO (CP) — Doctors at the Player's International Canadian Open tennis championships have been working overtime the last couple of days on two of the world's greatest players, but it appears the most pain is being suffered by tournament officials.

For two days, the big questions at the $325,000 tournament were whether Bjorn Borg's knee and John McEnroe's ankle would hold out.

Borg pronounced his knee in fine shape following a second-round victory Wednesday but McEnroe, the second seed, had to retire in his match because of an injury to his ankle suffered in a first-round match Tuesday night.

Borg reported a swelling in the knee after Tuesday night's win over Steve Rogul of Toronto but said Wednesday following his 7-6, 6-3 win over Tom Gullikson of the U.S., that is still was not bothering him.

McEnroe retired in his match with Eric Van Dillen while leading 4-3.

Turnabout time for Cincinnati

By The Associated Press

If Cincinnati Reds go on to repeat as National League West champions this year, they can look back on the last three nights as the turning point of the baseball season.

While their closest rivals for the title, Los Angeles Dodgers and Houston Astros, both lost three games in a row to second-division clubs, the Reds swept a three-game set from San Diego Padres to take over first place.

On Wednesday, Mike LaCoss allowed only three hits over six innings, one of them a three-run homer by Jerry Mumphrey, and Mario Soto, 6-5, got the victory with three innings of hitless relief as the Reds beat San Diego 4-3.

In the East, Montreal Expos and Pittsburgh Pirates remained tied for the lead after both lost. Louis Cardinals outscored Montreal 7-5 while New York Mets defeated Pittsburgh 5-3.

The Reds now lead Los Angeles by a half-game and Houston by one as they took over first place for the first time since May 16. On June 22 they were seven games out.

NL owners voted down the DH rule at the conclusion of the summer meetings Wednesday.

Blues continue sizzling pace

By ERNIE FEDORUK

This being the jam-making season, housewives can't do without Certo. It makes things jell.

The stuff doesn't quite work on baseball teams, but the jelling reaction has turned Victoria Blues into the sweet commodity in the professional Northwest League.

There was no letup Wednesday. The hot Blues singed Eugene Emeralds 4-1 at Royal Athletic Park to keep the pressure on the North Division-leading Bellingham Mariners.

It was the Blues' fourth straight, their seventh win in their last eight, and the 15th in 21 games. But the difference between the 1-2 runners remained at three games because Bellingham beat Medford 3-1.

"We've jelled," feels playing-manager Jim Gattis. "Everybody is playing good, solid baseball. I can't properly emphasize how solid we've become.

"First off, things have settled in the outfield. It is great. The pitching is coming through and I think we have our stopper in the bullpen. And defensively, we're as good as any team in the league.

"The thing is, we no longer have to rely on one or two players. Everybody is capable of doing a job, and they all contribute.

"I think we can overhaul Bellingham because, the way we're going, we're capable of playing .700 ball the rest of the way. I don't think Bellingham can keep it up."

Robbie Butler was the stopper Wednesday, and Gattis used the relief pitcher's performance as an example of the high-riding confidence that prevails in the Victoria dugout. Starting pitcher Mike Otto was only one out from a route-going performance but ran into a jam in the ninth when Emerald loaded the bases.

Butler tossed only two pitches to seal Otto's third victory. The Emeralds' final batter took a strike, then grounded into a game-ending forceout.

Despite the loss that squared their record at 28-28, the Ems remained on top in the Southern Division, by a game, because second-place Salem dropped a 13-11 slugfest to Central Oregon Phillies.

Offensively for the Blues, Gattis, catcher Don Hyman and second baseman Paul Stevens led the way. Gattis doubled to drive in one run and scored a second; Hyman, heading for a record, also doubled to drive in a run, while Stevens went two-for-four.

Hyman's double was his 22nd of the season. He needs only two more to tie and three to break the record of 25 set by Steve Collett of Portland.

Blues conclude their Royal Athletic Park series with Eugene tonight, then hit the road for seven games, including five at Grays Harbor.

One semi-final open as holidays upset play

By MAX LOW

It's not often that we get a Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis tournament entrant who flips over to South Africa for a holiday between matches!

But that's what has happened in this summer's seventh annual tourney and right now we're waiting for her to come back.

Trouble was, when Mary Alford was all ready with racquet in hand for her quarter-final women's singles match against Linda Lee her opponent was away on her vacation. The day Linda got back, Mary flew off for a visit to her former homeland.

As neither women really wanted to default after playing through three rounds of the summer-long tournament, we decided to give them a chance to play that match at 11 a.m. on Saturday, Aug.23, to decide the event's fourth semi-finalist.

Winner of that game will play again that afternoon at Henderson Park against Pam Gaffield in one of 10 semi-finals scheduled. The finals of the five events will be held starting at noon the following day — Sunday, Aug.24 — after which trophies will be presented to all winners and runners-up. And the winners of each event will also take home a new tennis racquet courtesy of Centre Court Racquets in the Stadacona Centre on Pandora Avenue.

Pam and husband Chad Gaffield, who came to Victoria just under a year ago from Montreal, have been creating quite a stir in this summer's Times tourney. Chad, disposing of opponents with relative ease along the way, is through to the last eight out of a starting field of 131 in the men's singles and the couple is through to the semi-finals of the mixed doubles.

But Pam says she's no 'veteran' by any stretch of the imagination and has only been playing tennis since she became an adult — about five years. Earlier this summer, Pam was beaten by Peggy Howes (last year's Times tourney women's champ) in the final of the UVic tourney and also went out to Peggy in the quarter-finals of the City Open women's "B" singles.

Former school friends and fellow members of the same field hockey team, Lynn Derry and Marg Mainwaring, meet in the semi-final on the other side of the draw.

Lynn, a resident of Victoria who teaches at Duncan's Tansor Elementary School, entered the Times tourney for the first time last year. She reached the quarter-finals of the mixed doubles, the only event she played in.

"I was only going to enter the mixed again this time but my boyfriend sent my entry form in and he put me down for the singles as well," she explains with a grin.

It was just as well he did, as Lynn has had a good tourney so far ousting young Angela Kolic 9-1 in the quarter-finals to reach the last four out of a women's starting field of 41 entrants.

Lynn's friend Marg. Mainwaring, a teacher at Parkland High School, edged Carolyn Jones, a semi-finalist for the last two years, 9-7.

Pam Gaffield reached the semis with a 6-1, 6-4 win over Cory Aspden, who is also a semi-finalist in the junior girls' singles event.

Joining the Gaffields as the first two pairs through to the semi-finals of the mixed doubles event are Cory and her young partner Jay Wilson. They defeated Vera Chiu and Ian Scott 6-3, 6-2 in the quarters and will both play in two semis as Jay earlier became the first player to reach the last four in the men's singles when he defeated Stuart Inglis 6-3, 6-2.

Bellies gain final

By The Canadian Press

New Westminster Salmonbellies reached the Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League finals Wednesday with a convincing 14-11 win over Richmond Roadrunners.

In the other game, Coquitlam Junior Adanacs edged Burnaby Cablevision 11-9 to even their semi-final at a game apiece.

City shooter wins

OTTAWA (CP) — Peter Page of Victoria fired 149 out of 150 Wednesday to win the President's Match at the 98th annual national small arms matches competition at Connaught Ranges, about 20 kilometres west of here.

The win, fired at 300 metres and 500 and 600 yards, counts towards the Governor-General's Prize, the competition's top award, which will be presented Saturday.

Ontario girl has golf lead

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Lisa Legris of Guelph Ont. is the first to admit that a 76 isn't really all that great in a major golf tournament, but also quick to add Wednesday she's like two more of them in the Canadian junior women's championship.

Her 76 gave her the first round lead over the par 72 Sunningdale Country Club, but only a one-stroke margin over France Dallaire of St. George Beauce, Que., and 13-year-old Audrey Bendick, of Tecumseh, Ont., near Windsor.

B.C. champion Nancy Callan of Victoria got off to a horrendous start with an 88.

The national team champion will be named after 36 holes of this 54-hole tournament.

Quebec is in first place with 158 followed by New Brunswick, 161; Manitoba, 163; Ontario, 164; Nova Scotia, and Saskatchewan, both 165; Alberta, 166; Prince Edward Island, 172; British Columbia, 175; and Newfoundland, 191.

Royal Oak gains final

Royal Oak capitalized on two Labatts' errors in the sixth inning to squeeze out a 2-1 victory at Central Park Wednesday night and reach the district men's senior "C" softball playoff final.

Al Strandlund, who struck out four and walked one, pitched a five-hitter to take the win.

The final is Friday night at Heywood Avenue Park.

Meanwhile, Mayfair Construction edged Coast Projects 7-6 in nine innings at Macdonald Park to take a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five Macdonald Men's League playoff series.

And at Hyacinth Park, Bemister's Welding and Butler Brothers both scored victories to reach the Victoria-Saanich Women's League final, which starts tonight at 6:30.

With Marilyn Bolton throwing a four-hitter, Bemisters defeated New York, New York 4-1 and Butlers clinched their best-of-three semi-final by beating Island Dryco Breakers 6-1.

Butlers got two hits apiece from Deanna Daniels and Sabrina Black.

Cranston lone city hope

The list of hometown challengers was down to one for today's championship semi-finals in the 58th Seniors North West Golf Association tournament.

The last hometown hope was Ray Cranston of the host Victoria Golf Club.

Cranston faced Arnold Groth of Seattle while medallist Erv Parent went against Keith Welts, last year's runnerup from Tacoma, in this morning's semi-finals.

Championship and flight finals will be played Friday.

Groth scored the most notable decision in Wednesday's quarter-finals, eliminating defending champion Bill Thompson of Victoria.

Cranston picked on clubmate and buttons partner Gord Verley while Welts defeated Lou Williams, also of Victoria. Southpaw Gord Millin of Royal Colwood, the only other Victorian to reach the eights, bowed to Parent.

Rads close to title

An upset appears imminent in the Cosmopolitan Senior Amateur Baseball League playoff final.

Capital Radiators took a 2-1 lead over league-champion Farmer Construction in the best-of-five final Wednesday night by finishing off a game halted by darkness Tuesday with a 6-5 victory at Lambrick Park.

And then the Radiators grabbed a 5-1 lead over the Farmers after five complete innings of the fourth game, which was also stopped by failing light. That game will be finished tonight at 6 p.m. and if a fifth game is necessary, it will be played Friday night.

Paopao out two weeks, Sloan for the season

VANCOUVER (CP) — As if Tuesday night's 24-7 loss to Calgary Stampeders wasn't enough bad news, B.C. Lions found out Wednesday afternoon they will be without quarterback Joe Paopao for two to three weeks and running back Leo Sloan for the rest of the Canadian Football League season.

A spokesman for the Lions said tests on Paopao's shoulder indicated the third-year pivot suffered a slightly separated shoulder after a let-down by the Lions' offensive line.

Stampeders mounted a fierce pass rush during the game and sacked Paopao and his replacement, rookie Roy Dewalt, six times. Dewalt replaced Paopao early in the fourth quarter.

Meanwhile, running back Leo Sloan will be lost for the season as tests Wednesday confirmed the rookie from Linfield College in Oregon suffered torn knee ligaments in the game. Sloan was to be operated on today.

The Lions already are missing running back Larry Key, a 1000-yard rusher in each of the last two seasons, with a knee problem. Fullback John Henry White played Tuesday despite bruised ribs.

Canadian running back Don Taylor likely will replace Sloan in the lineup when the Lions play their next game Aug. 20 in Regina against Saskatchewan Roughriders.

Paopao's injury means Dewalt likely will get his first regular season start at quarterback for the Lions.

However, a team spokesman said the Lions may be looking toward bringing in an experienced quarterback and said Mike Nott, who was beat out by Dewalt for the back up quaterback position, may be brought in for insurance.

To add to the woes, tight end Harry Holt has retained a U.S. lawyer and a player agent to renegotiate his contract.

Texas lawyer Dave Duke and player agent Vic Moriss will approach the B.C. management soon about rewriting Holt's contract which runs through the 1982 season.

Holt, with five touchdowns in B.C.'s first five games, signed a two-year agreement after the 1979 season, which also includes an option season, without the assistance of an agent.

Holt said he now regrets his decision to sign a new contract without the benefit of professional help.

Holt, who dropped out of the University of Arizona in 1978 and signed with the Lions, said he has a long-term amibition to play in the National Footall League.

Home named after McCartney

LIVERPOOL (UPI) — The Liverpool City Council has decided to name a home for the elderly after former Beatle Paul McCartney, but the accolade is being denied the other three idols of the 1960s rock group.

"McCartney has a house here, and has kept close to the city, while the others haven't," a spokesman for the Council said in explaining the decision.

The home is located in the Merseyside area of Liverpool. The Beatles are originally from there.

The Council said the other three — John Lennon, George Harrison and Ringo Starr — have virtually turned their backs on the native city they left for worldwide fame and fortune 20 years ago.

TV series to look at crime from inside

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — The Godfather movies provided an intriguing look inside organized crime, "and the stories were well done — though they would be just two pieces in our puzzle," says Richard Alan Simmons, producer of The Gangster Chronicles for NBC.

"The Godfather was one man's family," says Simmons, "and we have a much broader field — the entire history and sociology of organized crime — and we will be trying to deal with it with as much illumination as possible."

Production began not long ago on the series, which eventually could encompass 100 hours of air time over five years — maybe more. Simmons, who spent a decade researching the subject, has an order from NBC for 13 programs, "and if all goes well, we could conceivably continue the project for several years."

Simmons describes The Gangster Chronicles as a study of organized crime in the United States "from the inside looking out, rather than from the outside looking in — the way it has always been done before."

The series will focus, at least at the start, on the events and relationships that shaped the lives of three men who would run organized crime — Charles (Lucky) Luciano, Bugsy Siegel and Michael Lasker.

Simmons' plan is to begin the chronicles in 1907, with the three primary characters still young, and develop their lives over seven hours' programming to 1931, and a meeting in Chicago during which, the producer says, "crime was organized."

"Through the livest of these people," he says, "we'll see why it happened and how it happened."

"We've tried to get it right," Simmons says, "not from the point of view of the police, but from the standpoint of the history and economy and sociology of the time.

The Gangster Chronicles already has stirred a controversy. A judge in Morristown, N.J., reading of NBC's plan for the series, wrote Brandon Tartikoff, the president of NBC Entertainment:

"I hope your television series . . . will include the nationalities of all the political grafters throughout the United States who are silent partners or beneficiaries of the Mafia. The Mafia is not made up of Italians or Jewish people only."

The producer says one important image to be created is that of the founders of organized crime as businessmen. "Their whole effort to organize was, in a way, to control violence," he says.

"That's why they met in Chicago, to avoid war. And for a long time, there was plenty of killing, kiddo, but no war."

University women conference

Delegates from 50 countries will arrive in Vancouver this weekend for a 10-day conference sponsored by the International Federation of University Women.

The conference opens Saturday at the University of B.C. and runs until Aug. 26.

Federation president Dame Daphne Purves of New Zealand will chair the conference, which will include workshops on the theme — The Dignity and Worth of the Human Person.

Scientific, technological, legislative and legal subjects related to the theme will be discussed during the workshops.

Delegates may also enrol for discussions on architecture, gardens, Canadian literature, B.C. history, industry, economics, law, music, museums, health services and education.

Members of the Victoria University Women's Club will be travelling to Vancouver for the conference and several tour groups will visit Victoria.

Child welfare bill criticized

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C.'s new child welfare legislation was criticized Wednesday for failing to guarantee children's rights and to provide them with legal representation.

". . . Bill 45 fails to acknowledge the basic rights of children," said the B.C. Association of Social Workers, which noted that such guarantees are provided by child welfare laws in Quebec, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island.

The B.C. Family and Child Service Act was also rapped by the children's committee of the Social Planning and Review Council and by the B.C. Federation of Foster Parent Associations.

"The right of the child to have status as a person in the eyes of the law is a serious omission," said federation president Phyllis Primeau.

Children should be heard in all cases affecting their welfare, if necessary through appointment of a family court advocate, she said.

Elsewhere in the legislation, Primeau said, parents have the right to resume custody of a child but there is no right of the child to refuse to return to parental custody.

Another discrepancy seen by the federation is a provision giving parents the right to contact with the child but no provision for a child's right of access to parents.

SPARC called for postponement of debate on Bill 45, scheduled during the current session of the legislature, to allow time for written submissions or public hearings.

The bill was introduced Aug. 1 to replace the 79-year-old Protection of Children Act.

Bennett wants conference on economy

Premier Bill Bennett has asked Prime Minister Trudeau to call a federal-provincial conference of finance ministers to tackle Canada's economic problems.

The conference should be followed by a summit meeting of first ministers to nail down a workable national economic policy, Bennett said in an Aug. 6 letter released today.

This puts on a formal footing the suggestion Bennett first raised in a speech to the Teamsters' union convention in Vancouver last month.

In his letter to the prime minister Bennett states:

"I propose that provincial finance ministers meet with the federal finance minister to examine national financial requirements and consider solutions to our economic problems.

"This may require review of tax policies to determine how concerns over revenues and resources can be most effecrtively met.

"It might also involve critical examination of economic powers affecting the national economy."

At the same time he reiterates B.C.'s unalterable opposition to Ottawa's proposed energy export tax.

"Such a tax . . . would have harsh budgetary consequences for British Columbia."

In a statement released with the letter, Bennett called for a fresh approach to resolve the issues of constitutional reform, energy policy and economic policy.

These issues must be kept separate, he argued.

Those involved in the discussions have made the mistake of trying to handle them as a single problem, instead of three separate and distinct problems, Bennett said.

Bennett's letter to the prime minister ends with this commitment:

"British Columbians are willing to continue to do more than their share to ensure the well-being of our nation and to shape a better Canada."

Probe sought into charge Ganges developers stalled

The Capital Regional District will ask the provincial inspector of municipalities to investigate allegations that Salt Spring Island director Yvette Valcourt is stalling development in the Ganges core.

The regional board took the action Wednesday after receiving a letter from Tom Toynbee, general manager and president of Mouat's Trading Co. Ltd., asking for an investigation.

Director Bill McElroy moved that the investigation be carried out by an outside authority so it would be objective.

Board chairman Jim Campbell said he believed there was prima facie evidence that Valcourt, who owns a shopping centre in the upper part of Ganges, was "harassing her competition" and had placed a burden on CRD staff with inquiries about the issuance of health permits.

He said her persistent requests were impairing the functions of the CRD.

VALCOURT

. . . enough evidence

In his letter, Toynbee said: "We contend that the director's activities are grossly discriminatory and are consistently directed at her most visible business competitors.

"We respectfully suggest that it is about time the board came to the realization that it has spent a great deal of time investigating and debating the lawful activities of citizens in 'downtown' Ganges in minute detail while studiously overlooking the wholly improper activities of a fellow member."

Saanich mayor Mel Couvelier voted against the request for an inquiry because of the "implication that it carries with it" but Valcourt said she had no objection to such an inquiry.

Larger Sooke shop centre eyed

Capital Regional District directors took the first step Wednesday toward creation of a 15,000 square-foot shopping centre in East Sooke on the south side of the Sooke Basin.

The CRD's local planning and zoning committee recommended the Sooke settlement plan be amended to allow neighborhood commercial centres of that size. The size is now restricted to 5,000 square feet.

Sooke director Don Rittaler made the motion after the committee heard a presentation by planning consultant Tom Loney on behalf of the First National Mortgage Co. Ltd. The company wants rezoning to allow a shopping centre to be built adjacent to a subdivision of more than 100 lots which it has developed.

A public hearing will be held on the changing of the settlement plan and the rezoning application.

The committee will also recommend a development permit be issued to build 116 apartments and 47 townhouses on a 6.7-acre site on Helmcken Road.

Cressey Development Corporation and C.W. Bullock and Associates Ltd. are representing the developer, Taurus Investments Ltd.

Bullock agreed to certain terms laid down by the directors, which include donating part of the property, adjacent to Craigflower Creek, to the regional district as a park.

Other conditions include provision of a sidewalk through the site, underground wiring and speed limits of 30 kilometres per hour on internal roads.

The developer is also restricted to building one-family units in the area adjacent to Burnett Road.

In other business, the committee okayed a start on a secondary plan for Langford Lake and was told by chief community planner J.G. Masterton it should be completed in six to nine months. He said there will be input from the residents and liaison with the Langford Lake Planning Association.

Frank Sinatra initially signed up to do commercials for an ailing Chrysler Corp. at a rate of $1 a year — but inflation apparently caught up with the deal. Automaker Chairman Lee A. Iacocca handed Ol' Blue Eyes the keys to a brand new metallic-gray Chrysler Imperial, marking the company's return to the luxury car market. And what about that annual dollar? Sinatra says his union won't let him do it — insists he get the minimum $320 a take.

Adding insult to injury, two thieves snatched the purse of Italian actress Sophia Loren while she and her mother were changing a tire on their car. The two women were operating the jack on a roadside in the town of Ladispoli, near Rome. The sloe-eyed actress lost about $120, her passport and part of the script Sophia, an autobiographical film being made for a U.S. TV network.

Loren

Never say there's a gulf between sports and show biz. The dialogue that flew between Muhammad Ali and Larry Holmes in Las Vegas where they recently gathered to lay a little lip on each other in honor of their Oct. 2 title fight was right out of a script. Lipped Ali, "I used to write a lot more poems about opponents. I used to do a lot of things I don't have to do for this cakewalk." Holmes punched back: "Used to! Used to! Used to! I understand you used to be a fighter. How long ago was that?"

Who's the most envied coach in sports today? Rick Roth, that's who. He isn't mentor to the New York Yankees or the Denver Broncos or any other headline-grabbing herd of beef on the hoof, and he wouldn't trade places with the people who are. Roth coaches a New York-based softball team made up of Penthouse magazine's centerfold lovelies and the burden of the job is to take them all over the country to play benefit games for the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

The largest slot-machine jackpot ever paid on a quarter — $67,261.80 — was won in Reno the other night by Barbara Shelton, a bookkeeper from Campbell, Calif. "I couldn't believe it when it happened — usually I'm not lucky at all," Mrs. Shelton said after she triggered the cash outflow by lining up three "men in the barrel" symbols on a machine at Harold's Club.

Dear Abby:

I'm 34 and this is my first marriage. I have been married for three weeks to a wonderful woman (29) with a seven-year-old son by a previous marriage.

The boy and I get along very well and he is a fine youngster, but from the night his mother and I returned from our honeymoon (which we shared with him, by the way) he has been coming into our bed to spend the night.

At first we let him stay, thinking he was frightened or lonely, and perhaps after a few nights of comforting and reassurance, he would stay in his own bed. No way. he has been sleeping with us every night!

The last four nights I have been going into the boy's room to sleep. I suddenly realized that this kid has pushed me out of my rightful place.

Abby, I love my wife and realize that she has to consider her son's feelings, but what about mine?

Newlywed and Sleeping Alone

Dear Newlywed:

The "kid" has problems sharing his mother and accepting the fact that she now has another love. He needs therapy. Explain this to your wife. And if she disagrees with you, she needs therapy, too.

Dear Abby:

I am 24 and just had my fifth baby. My husband is 26. I had him all talked into getting a vasectomy, then the guys at work told him he was a fool to risk losing his manhood.

The way our doctor explained it to us, it wouldn't hurt my husband's manhood at all. Is there some question about this, or are the guys at work right?

One thing for sure, we can't afford any more kids, and I'm plumb worn out from those I have.

Tired

Dear Tired:

Tell your husband to quit listening to the guys at work and listen to his doctor. A vasectomy in no way reduces a man's manhood.

Dear Abby:

We are engaged to be married, but I'm not sure I can go through with it even though I'd like to. We love each other, Abby, but he is four years younger than I. (I am 22 and he is 18.)

His parents like me very much and I get along great with his whole family. My parents didn't say anything directly to me, but I can tell they don't approve of the relationship because I am four years older.

I don't understand how life works. If he were four years older than I, there would be no problem. However, since I am a female, it seems almost a crime to marry a younger guy.

Having Doubts

Dear Having:

First, no, it is not wrong to marry a younger guy, but since you are "having doubts," I advise you to postpone marriage until you have absolutely no doubts whatsoever!

Strut, shuffle or stride - your walk tells plenty

CHICAGO (AP) — The way a person walks can unintentionally communicate his self-esteem and his mood, says a fitness consultant.

"Subconsciously, we learn quickly to evaluate others on the basis of posture, gait and other telltale signs," says Maurita Robarge, professor of psychical education and kinesiology at the University of Wisconsin-LaCrosse, and a consultant for a shoe manufacturer.

"A basic walking style is set early in life, formed by family or peer-group copying, personality and, possibly, structural problems," says Ms. Robarge.

"But, a walk also varies according to the situation, and can be a barometer of feelings, attitudes and moods."

Some clues that she says can sharpen awareness of your own and other people's walking styles include:

— Posture: A slump may indicate feeling of inadequacy, if it's a normal part of a person's walk. An occasional slumping posture may just mean the person is facing a temporary "slump" in business or personal life.

— Stride: A slow, ambling stroll can be a sign of aimlessness, but a brisk, forceful walk indicates purpose.

— Head Angle: The "executive go-getter" type often walks with the upper body at a forward angle, a fast, purposeful pace. This type is willing to meet problems head-on. Walkers who keep their heads buried in their chests are in a meditative mood, and do not invite conversation.

— Arm Swing: A good arm swing expresses an open, receptive mood. When arms are limp and hands are tucked into pockets, the walker probably wants to be alone.

Dancers and gymnasts are easy to spot: They walk with a bouncy, up-down movement, that comes from well-conditioned foot and leg muscles.

Some people show off as they walk: The "macho man" often walks with an attempted swagger; his feet swing out and around from the hip joint with each step, causing a slight rocking of the upper body. He's trying to impress you.

A walk may also be used as a "come-on," with a forward thrust of the pelvis, or an exaggerated side-to-side pelvic movement.

To assess a walker's state of mind, Ms. Robarge suggests, try to assess the situation:

— People who can't stand still at a bus stop or train depot may have an overflow of energy from a high-powered nervous system. Or, they may just be impatient to get moving.

— One person can accomplish a lot in very few steps, while another flits around a room several times to accomplish one task. The first person is more methodical, has everything under control.

— The normally buoyant walk of a young executive may become a slow shuffle after a dressing-down by the boss.

— A strut tells you immediately that the tennis player won a set without much trouble.

— People wo have a tense, rigid walk at the office, but relax on private walks, may feel their job is a strain, or may need privacy to open up.

Overweight-is-risky 'myth' deflated

856-pound T.J. Albert of West Virginia is not what Dr. Keys had in mind

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Contrary to conventional wisdom, middle-aged men do not necessarily risk premature death by being a bit fat, a researcher contends.

"For years, everybody's been believing this propaganda (about the health risks of being overweight), but for the most part, it isn't so," said Dr. Ancel Keys, professor emeritus of physiology at the University of Minnesota. "And we have excellent evidence that shows it isn't so.

"We and other investigators find that in the absence of hypertension (high blood pressure), overweight is not a risk factor at all . . . except at the far extremes of (both) overweight and underweight."

Keys made the statement in a lecture prepared for the opening session of the Sixth Western Hemisphere Nutrition Congress here.

Interviewed earlier, he said little or no data are available for young men or for women.

But "for men (ages) 40 to 60, I think we know exactly where we stand. This whole thing has been vastly overblown."

Keys said he has been following statistics on 12,600 men in the United States, Japan, and Europe for 10 to 20 years.

Except for the grossly obese, he contends there is no increased mortality from heart disease or any other cause associated with overweight. And he said the risks seem greater for those at the other end of the scale, the extremely thin.

Keys was reluctant to specify the limits of obesity, but other researchers have suggested that 10 to 20 excess pounds are rarely a problem.

Keys said his and others' research shows "the best prospect of avoiding early death is to be somewhat above the average in relative weight."

The researcher added, however, that obese patients with high blood pressure or diabetes should be advised to shed pounds, since both problems seem associated with weight.

The conference is being attended by about 1,000 nutritionists and physicians from the U.S., Canada, Mexico and South America. It is sponsored by American Medical Association, the American Institute of Nutrition and the Nutrition Society of Canada, among others.

AMA spokesman Frank Chappell said Keys designed the K-ration first used by U.S. troops in the Second World War and is "a leading international authority on dietary fats and heart disease."

Rheumatism, arthritis aren't the same

By DR. L. L. COLEMAN

For about two years, I have had aches and pains in the joints of my hands and my feet and in my back. I'm 64 years old. I'm sure that I have arthritis. My husband says it must be rheumatism because it comes and goes. Aren't they both the same?

D.O.R.

Dear D.O.R.:

Actually, there is a difference. Rheumatism is a general term applied to a great number of conditions, acute and chronic, associated with stiffness and soreness of the muscles, joints and tendons. The American Rheumatism Association has developed a classification which lists about 100 different conditions, all included under the umbrella of this complex disorder.

Arthritis is considered to be one of the subdivisions of rheumatism. There are two major forms of arthritis. The first, rheumatoid arthritis, is a chronic inflammatory condition that affects the joints and the tissues around them. This type seems to occur about three times more frequently among women than among men.

The second large classification of arthritis is osteoarthritis, a chronic condition that seems to occur more often in the older age groups, especially among those who are excessively overweight.

Osteoarthritis causes degenerative changes within the joints. Hard, knobby enlargements of the joints of the spine, the wrists, the shoulders and the feet are deformities which can interfere with the ease of movement.

The distinction between rheumatoid arthritis and osteoarthritis is established by blood studies and X-rays. When the exact diagnosis is made, treatment can begin.

With rheumatoid arthritis, the salicylates, the basic component of aspirin, still remains one of the most effective forms of treatment.

For both types of arthritis, massage, ultrasonic vibrations, mud packs and water therapy can often bring welcome relief. Almost every few months new drugs — known as "anti-inflammatory drugs" — are being devised. These, in addition to cortisone, have provided relief and comfort to many people with this painful, debilitating disorder.

It has been said that the decade of the 1980's will show the greatest spurt in accumulated knowledge about arthritis, both from the point of view of prevention as well as new forms of treatment.

The surgical advances are already astounding. Many people who might otherwise be bedridden are functioning free from pain because of the newer methods of joint replacement.

The bare facts? Nobody cares

ROCHESTER, Pa. (AP) — What do you say to a naked lady?

Nothing special these days, said a trustee of the American Sunbathing Association.

"Our biggest problem is that we are not controversial anymore," says Hap Hathaway. "It used to be something risque. Now we're ignored."

Hathaway was attending the association's week-long annual convention in Rochester, which began Tuesday.

Treatment methods raise more questions than answers

More study urged on Indian drinking

By MARY DEPTUCK

MONTREAL (CP) — Drinking, the No. 1 killer among Indians, is still a mystery which sorely lacks study in Canada, says Joseph Couture, a federal government consultant on alcohol abuse.

In fact, there has been no methodological evidence in Canada to either support or dispute the widespread image that the majority of Indians have a drinking problem, Couture told a convention Tuesday of the Canadian Addictions Foundation.

"Measures have not yet been developed to define Indian alcohol consumption rates or actual drinking patterns," Couture said. "There have been no studies attempting to find the origins and causes of native alcoholism."

And he said current treatment and analysis for alcoholism raises more questions than it answers.

Relevant questions about drinking style, economics, social organization and personality traits must be answered to better understand and solve the problem, he said.

He pointed to two successful treatment centres run by Indians in Alberta — the Poundmaker's Lodge and the Nechi Institute.

These institutes are characterized by holistic treatment of alcoholism, tending to patients' physical, emotional, mental and spiritual needs through a community approach.

Patrick Shirt, a member of the Nechi Institute, said the Indians themselves must shoulder the responsibilty of alcoholism.

"As a native people, I think we've been studied to death," the young Cree said. "It's all right to have a lot of profitable theories, but all I know is that alcohol is the biggest killer in Indian countries and that it's rewarding to see people recover."

Earlier Tuesday, Dr. Guy Marcoux told convention delegates that specialists who treat drug addicts should drop their scientific front and treat their patients as human beings.

He said most medical specialists are opposed to dropping prescribed medical approaches because they fear a loss of business.

"Outside their jobs, medical professionals don't object to what I do and say . . . they agree it isn't a question of mental health, abstinence or dependency, but a question of well-being," he said.

"But they need sick persons to make a living. They make it (drug addiction) a disease so that insurance companies and governments will continue paying for it."

Calorie facts to chew over nutrition matters

dr. elizabeth bright-see and jane hope

No matter who we talk to, he or she is on one type of diet or another. And the majority of our readers appear to be obsessed with either losing, gaining (if they're lucky) or maintaining weight. Dieting is definitely the nation's Number 1 pastime. Most people who are struggling to stay on a diet wagon, say they're hungry in-between meals. So they munch, or nibble on all sorts of dangerous delectables, thinking that "it's only a handful of this or a mouthful of that." We thought that you'd like to see how many calories some of your favorite snacks contain and have listed ones that contain 100 calories. Perhaps you think 100 calories aren't much . . . but on a 1,200 calorie weight loss diet, it only takes 12 of these innocent-appearing goodies to fill your daily calorie quota.

So read on. And if you're on a diet — stick this up on your refrigerator door as a persuasive reminder. Snacks fulfill a useful purpose in today's lifestyle. But the calories they contain must be counted.

"Nutritious Noshes" — approximately 100 calories each.

1 medium banana
1½ cups fresh raspberries
¾ cup plain yogurt
1 cup baked custard
1 ounce Blue cheese
1 ounce Blue cheese spread plus 3 crackers
½ small liverwurst sandwich
1¼ cups beef noodle soup
9 to 12 mixed, shelled nuts
1¾-inch piece angel food cake
10 dill pickles
3 cups beef broth
½ cup oyster stew (made with milk)
4 thin pretzels
2-inch slice pizza
1 cup plain cornflakes (no milk, or sugar)
1½ slices whole wheat bread
2 tangerines
5 uncooked prunes
1½ raw apples, medium
¼ avocado
2 raw tomatoes
1 cup blueberries
1/3 average size hamburger plus bun
1/3 cup sherbert
½ plain waffle
12 almonds
1 cup skim milk
2 cups tomato juice
1 medium seedless grapefruit
2 large fresh peaches
1 ounce Camembert cheese
1 plain cookie
6 soda crackers
½ ounce sunflower seeds
4 tablespoons seedless raisins
2/3 pound fresh bean sprouts
13 melba toast rounds
2 cups popcorn (oil added)
1 tablespoon peanut butter
1 cup fresh orange juice
1 wedge (4 x 6 inches) watermelon
2 slices crisp bacon
1 cup buttermilk
3 ounces creamed cottage cheese
2 cups canned asparagus (solids and liquids)
3 cups green beens, raw
3 ounces raw clams
2½ ounces canned salmon, drained
1½ ounces beef liver, broiled
2 slices bologna
1 medium baked or boiled potato, plain
6 tiny whole beets
2 whole stalks broccoli, cooked
10 cups Chinese cabbage, raw
9 ounces lemonade
4 fresh plums, small

Researchers offer new way to allergy relief

IOWA CITY, Iowa (UPI) — University of Iowa researchers say they have a new way to spell relief for allergy sufferers — BRL 19918.

Drs. Hal Richerson and W. James Metzger say the drug — gluteraldehyde-modified, Tyrosine Adsorbed, or BRL 19918 — has been proven successful in treating patients sensitive to ragweed in tests at the Adult Allergy-Immunology Division of University Hospitals and Clinics.

The drug, however, still must receive Food and Drug Administration approval before it is available to the general public.

People who previously could not take desensitization injections because it was likely they would develope reactions should be able to use the new medicine, university officials said.

Those allergic to pollens, house dust, molds, animal dander or some stinging insects have gained relief through desensitization shots in which the allergen is injected into the patient in gradually increasing amounts. The shots, given weekly, build up tolerance.

Students memory banks?

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Many high school students are becoming little more than memory banks with faint understanding of what they are learning because elementary schools haven't taught them to read properly, Dr. Bernice Wong believes.

The concerned professor at Simon Fraser University's education faculty has a $9,999 award from the Social Science and Humanities Research Council of Canada to examine the pressing problem and try to correct it.

"I'm interested in secondary school pupils because I think they're being neglected," Wong said. "I'm not making any claims he'll get into college, but I can enable him to improve substantially."

In elementary school, she explained, education was "content-oriented" — based on cramming as much knowledge as possible into a pupil's memory with little concern over whether the information was understood.

At the high school level, emphasis was shifted to comprehension, for which the elementary school training may have left the student unprepared.

"In secondary school, the nature of the problem is that you've got to really understand the text to answer any questions. You can tell there's a problem if they read something and then can't tell you what it's about.

Wong said past research has shown that only in rare cases could a student fail to comprehend a passage because of a "severe memory deficit."

"You have to look for other explanations and my research is geared to finding out what the other explanations are," she said. Generally, she has found "it's a lack of awareness in reading assignments.

"The student isn't lazy, they're just not aware of what is the most important sense of a paragraph. They don't have a clear understanding of what's important; they can't separate the wheat from the chaff."

To test her theory, she selected 120 students aged 14-16 and set up "pre-training" and "proper-training" divisions.

In the pre-training exercise, students read a basic paragraph and were asked to identify the main idea. When the student can determine the main idea 80 per cent of the time they advance to the proper training procedure.

"In the proper training method, I make more demands of them," Wong said. "Now, after picking out the main idea I say, 'Now you make a question.' He has to really understand the main idea in order to change it into a question.

"I'm teaching them to self-monitor their own comprehension of the important idea in a passage. If I'm training them effectively, I should see them asking better and better questions and this did happen.

"I have to see if they can predict what will come out in a test and after analyzing the first half of my data I can see they they are doing better."

Wong said that after a 90-minute session over a five-day period all of her students had a far better understanding of what they were reading.

Natural mothers have needs . . . are human, too

By RUTH ANSELM
Los Angeles Times

I am a natural mother. As I write those words, I sense the irony, for surely anyone who has given birth is a natural mother. But that expression is reserved for a certain minority — those who have given birth and, for one reason or another, have given the child up for adoption.

I hear a great deal about the problems and needs of adoptive parents, the problems and needs of adoptees, and the assistance available to them. I hear very little about the natural mother. But we do have needs. We are human.

It is not easy to give up something you love, something that is a part of you. Sometimes, it is necessary.

Eighteen years ago, I gave birth to a boy. I wasn't promiscuous. Despite what were considered adequate birth control measures, I found myself pregnant by someone I loved very dearly, but couldn't marry. After weeks of soul-searching and counsel, I decided to have the baby. Those were not the days of safe and legal abortions.

I wanted very much to keep my baby, but I knew that by giving him up he would have the many things I couldn't possibly give him, including a normal family life. It was an act of love and faith, not of selfishness or neglect.

This is to you, son, whatever your name and wherever you are. When you were born, I wanted desperately to hold you — just once. I wanted to know that you were whole and healthy, that you cried, that your tiny arms and legs moved, that you actually were there in the nursery down the hall. You see, son, you didn't come into this world easily. At the last, you arrived by emergency Caesarean. I heard the whispered consultations, Too old," they said, for a first birth," I was in my late 30s.

The truth, which I alone knew, was that I couldn't bear to part with you. When you had gone from my body, you would be gone from my life. I couldn't face that. I held on to you as long as the strength lasted.

A few weeks later the adoption agency sent me a photograph of a handsome sleepy baby boy, with a note saying that you had joined a loving family somewhere in Southern California and were bringing them much joy. I held the photo to my breast and cried all night. Then I wiped my swollen eyes and put the photograph away, but not too far away. I still have it — bent, creased, somewhat faded and very tear-stained.

I don't think about you so much now. Time plays a magic horn. And we are both growing up.

You have reached maturity now. Perhaps as I write this, you will be entering college — a time in life for stock-taking. I wonder if you are questioning your origin. You may be one of those adoptees searching for his real identity, fighting to have sealed records opened. You may not. I may never know.

But if you are among that group, or ever will be, then I want very much that you know this: I would not be embarrassed to see you. I would not be averse to meeting you. I would welcome it. If your biological father were here (he died several years ago), I'm sure he would want the same.

I want to know if your eyes are blue or brown, if you play tennis or surf, if you excel in math or English, if you play the flute in the school orchestra, if you write poetry or drive fast sports cars, if laughing girls in flowered bikinis fall in love with you. And so many more things. Yes, I would like very much to meet you, and to know you.

So, I have taken a well-considered step. I have written the Adoptees' Liberty Movement Association in New York City, giving them the details of your birth and of myself. I am also writing the adoption agency asking them to co-operate if they receive any request for assistance in locating me.

Perhaps one day, if you have not already done so, you may take that step. But if you do, please take your adoptive parents into your confidence. Ask them to help you. Let them work with you. They are your real family. Whatever you are, you owe to them. If they love you, and I'm sure they do, your action would not sever family ties. It would strengthen them.

Help offered crime victims

An elaborate justice system exists to punish offenders who gain from crime but their victims — injured physically, emotionally or materially — are often overlooked.

A project to aid these people was established this summer in Victoria.

Any victim of a crime, whether reported to police or not, may phone 383-5111 for information about a wide variety of help, including how to seek insurance settlements, getting application forms for assistance under the Criminal Injury Compensation Act, arrange for emergency services, contact a lawyer or just get support while trying to get over the experience.

Heather LePage, who is supervising the project funded by the federal solicitor-general's office, said it's slowly getting off the ground.

The staff handle one or two calls a day. Police departments are learning about it and are referring people.

The majority of calls come from the elderly and generally concern thefts, break-ins or assaults, she said.

Besides practical information about how to resolve the situation, people who call often need to ventilate emotional reactions to the crime, said LePage.

She's had personal experience at being a crime victim. Her own apartment was broken into and $100 stolen.

LePage said she was astonished at how she felt about the break-in.

"It's a violation of your personal space . . . it's quite threatening, there's a feeling of not being safe in your own home."

It's especially disconcerting for elderly people and the project tries to help them get over their initial fear and upset.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Maintain low profile. Listen, observe and plan for future. Means avoid direct confrontations, be patient and play cards close to chest. Spotlight on family reunion, discussion affecting home environment. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio natives figure prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Obtain valid hint from Aries message. Look beyond the immediate, perceive potential and don't be too modest concerning talents, abilities. Keep resolutions concerning employment, diet, nutrition and special services.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Good lunar aspect coincides now with speculation, exciting discoveries and romantic relationships. Cancer and Capricorn natives dominate scenario. One in position of authority lends financial and moral support.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Ability to close transaction is emphasized. Don't hang on to "security blanket." Reach beyond apparent limitations. Aries and Libra natives play key roles. One who seemed distant will confide feelings and you will have a new friend.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Shake off lethargy. You have grand opportunity for new start in new direction. Calls, messages, short trips and special reports dominate scenario. Humor and versatility become twin allies. Another Leo lends spice to life.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You gain co-operation from one who has key to "missing link." Spotlight to personal possessions, protection of valuables, emotional and financial security. Cancer, Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Intuitive intellect proves a reliable guide.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be selective. Opportunities abound; key is to define terms and to open lines of communication. Wear bright colors. Be conspicuous by your presence. Cycle is such that circumstances favor your efforts. Puzzle pieces fall into place.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You have rare opportunity to rectify past errors. Aquarius, Taurus, Leo natives figure prominently. Visit friend confined to home or hospital. You can learn lesson which aids in resolving dilemma. Frank discussion is on agenda.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Personal magnetism soars; member of opposite sex pays significant compliment. Be receptive, gracious and don't kick toe in sand. Wish comes true — what you seek is close at hand. Imprint style. Don't be disuaded by one who is envious and lacks faith.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Differences settled in connection with career, reputation, aspirations and one who enjoys playing role of "director." Standing in community is elevated. Special honor could be forthcoming. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio natives figure prominently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Get promises in writing. If practical, you succeed. You can choose between happiness and intrigue. Pisces native aids in locating item that had been misplaced. Long-distance call solidifies plans. Sense of direction comes into focus.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Emphasis on mystery, discovery which can lead to profitable enterprise. One close to you, including partner or mate, aids in resolving financial dilemma. Cancer and Capricorn natives figure prominently. What you have been seeking will become available — in surprise fashion.

IF AUGUST 15 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you are able to use voice in compelling manner. You are attracted to luxury and tend to have a "sweet tooth." Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. In September, you can expect change, travel, variety and gain through written word. Relationships intensify and you learn where you stand with special member of opposite sex. Your most memorable month of this year will be December. You are attractive, creative and have tendency to act on impulse. You soon will have opportunity to straighten out misunderstanding with family member. You'll feel better as result.

Warning from BBB

HALIFAX (CP) — The Better Business Bureau is warning customers to be on the lookout for unlicensed, itinerant vendors who are selling their goods from trucks door-to-door and in shopping malls across Nova Scotia.

Ann Janega, the bureau's general manager, said in an interview the BBB has received a number of inquiries this summer about itinerant vendors who sell poor-quality goods and then disappear.

"It's very difficult to trace these people," she said. "And once they are gone, it's difficult to do much for the consumer."

"People realize too late that they've been had and by then nothing can be done."

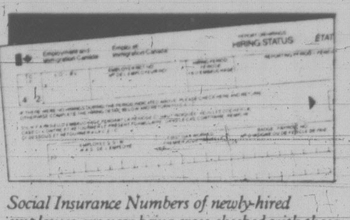
A new way to detect Unemployment Insurance abuse.

Most people getting unemployment insurance play by the rules. But some people don't seem to know that they can't take a job and collect benefits without telling us they're working. That's why employers are being asked to send us the starting date and Social Insurance Number or extracts from computer payroll tapes for each employee they hire or rehire. This information is cross-checked with the Social Insurance Numbers of people receiving unemployment insurance benefits. Only cases of potential abuse will ever surface. After investigation, anyone found receiving benefits to which they are not entitled will have to repay them.

It may be an honest mistake. Some people forget or don't understand they must tell Unemployment Insurance and report their total earnings when they start a new job. In that case, repayment is all that's required. But, a penalty or prosecution may follow when the new system detects people wrongly collecting benefits.

If you are collecting unemployment insurance benefits, and start a new job, please say so on your UI claimant report card.



Social Insurance Numbers of newly-hired employees are now being cross-checked with those of people receiving unemployment insurance benefits. Only cases of potential abuse will ever surface.

DELTA (CP) — A U.S. fishboat captain abandoned his crew and left them to face charges of illegally fishing in Canadian waters, fisheries officials said Wednesday.

The Washington state salmon seiner Justice was seized Tuesday afternoon in Canadian waters off Point Roberts.

But fisheries officials say that as patrol vessels approached, the captain took to the skiff, rowed to the Liberty, another U.S. seiner fishing in the area, and made a quick retreat back across the international boundary.

The Justice, caught with its net out and fish on board, was brought into Steveston under arrest.

Two Washington state men have been charged under the Coast Fisheries Protection Act for fishing illegally in Canadian waters and were to appear in provincial court in Delta on Aug. 29.

No names or home towns were released.

Fisheries supervisor Wayne Lowden said the maximum penalty for conviction by indictment under the act is a $25,000 fine or two years in jail. The maximum penalty for summary conviction is a $5,000 fine or three months.

Lowden said the two U.S. seiners were spotted on the Canadian side of the boundary at about 3:30 p.m. by a fisheries officer in a one-man patrol boat who kept them under observation for an hour before summoning help.

The fish aboard were impounded and the Justice will be detained at least until the men appear in court.

Jim Duxworthy, a Canadian fisheries officer, described the Justice as a "floating death trap."

"The hold has not been painted or cleaned, the engine is rusty and conditions are deplorable for the crew."

He said the vessel has no refrigerator to store food, there is no ventilation in the crew's quarters and the toilet, which is located in front of the kitchen, has to be flushed with a water bucket.

The U.S. Coast Guard has been asked to look at the seiner.

Duxworthy said a warrant issued a year ago against the skipper of the Justice for illegally fishing in Canadian waters is still outstanding.

Al Cooper, spokesman for the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission, said that seine fishing was permitted on the U.S. side of the boundary Tuesday, but not on the Canadian side.

A 24-hour gillnet opening in waters off the mouth of the Fraser River ended at 8 a.m. Tuesday.

The opening, the first in inshore waters in recent weeks, was permitted because of good catches in Juan de Fuca Strait and encouraging results of test fishing for Chilko Lake sockeye.

But results of the 24-hour opening did not come up to expectations and the commission decided against extending it.

The commission will review offshore catches and continuing test fishing Friday to consider openings for next week.

Nuclear role to be marked

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's role in nuclear development and technology will be marked with a commemorative stamp to be issued Sept. 3, the post office announced.

A statement said the stamp bears a red, black and silver image of a pitchblende molecule. Pitchblende is a basic uranium mineral. The stamp was designed by Jacques Charette of Ottawa.

The statement said 11 million stamps will be produced by the Canadian Bank Note Company in Ottawa.

Trophy hunt disrupted

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Greenpeace protest group left today for Spatsizi Plateau in a bid to stop trophy hunting in the remote northern British Columbia park.

Patrick Moore, president of the Vancouver-based environmental organization, told a news conference Wednesday the 12-member party will attempt to thwart trophy hunters by scaring off game and by watching the hunters.

"Hunters don't like people seeing them chop the heads off animals," Moore said.

Greenpeace says stocks of sheep, moose, caribou, mountain goats and bears are declining. The B.C. fish and wildlife branch, which allows limited hunting in the park, says wolves are at least partially to blame for the declines.

"But you can't legislate wolves to stop hunting. You can with hunters," Moore said.

Moore said no confrontations are expected between Greenpeace and trophy hunters.

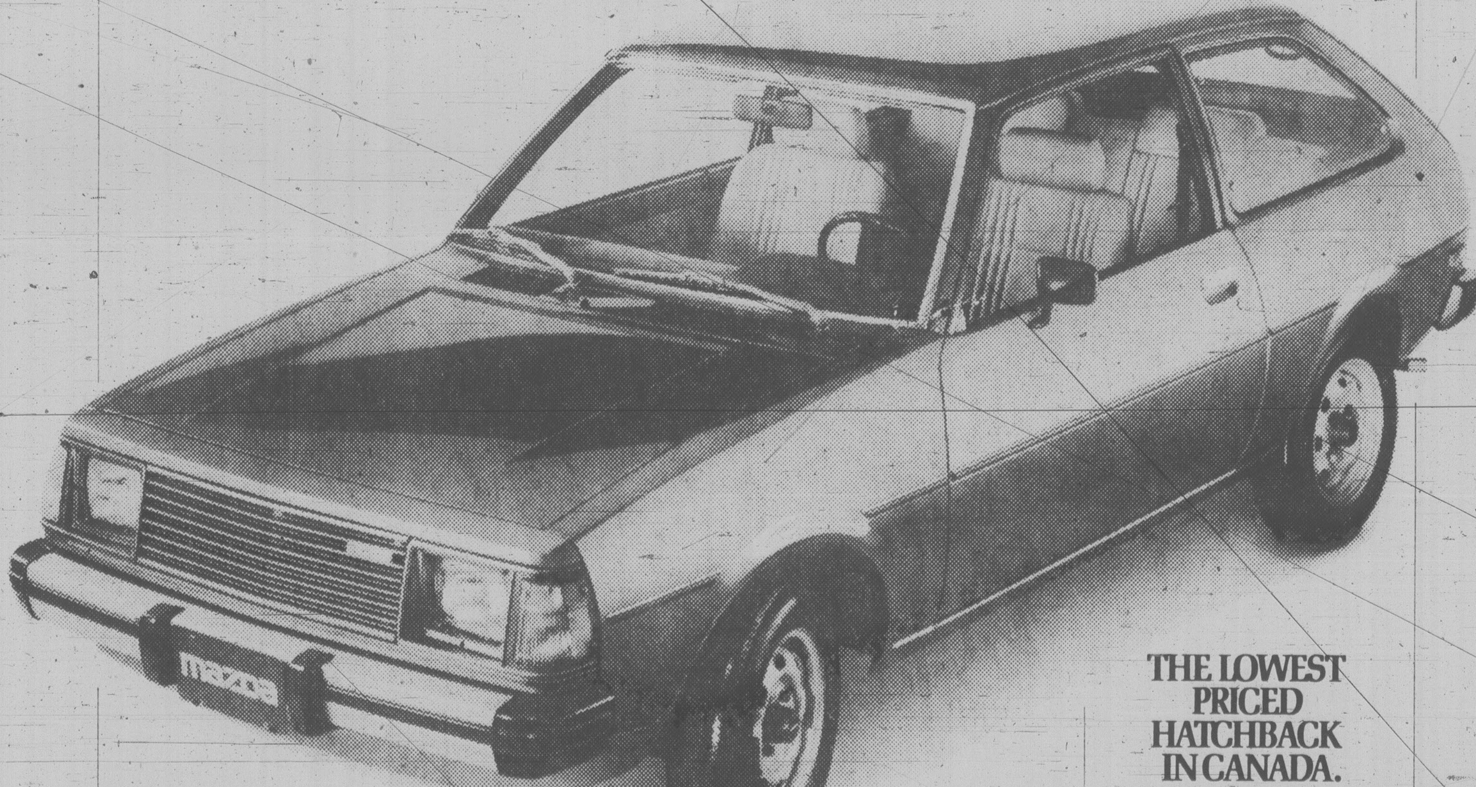
Mazda GLC. The Great Little Car.



THE LOWEST PRICED HATCHBACK IN CANADA.

Mazda GLC with the 1.4 litre engine and manual 4 speed transmission has an estimated fuel economy rating of 63 km/gal. or 7.1 L (100 km). That works out to 41 miles per gallon. And to match GLC's economy, you also have spirited performance. After all, even an economy car should be fun to drive.

Mazda's Great Little Car gives you a great deal for a good deal less than the competition. Take a look at what comes as standard equipment on every GLC. There's a lot to like.

For Comfort.
Reclining front bucket seats. Tinted glass all around. Adjustable front headrests. Flow-through ventilation. MacPherson strut front suspension with coil springs and anti-roll bar. Rear suspension with coil springs. Plus an amazingly roomy interior.

For Convenience.
Power assisted brakes. Fold down rear seat for extra trunk space. Electric rear window defroster. Two speed wipers. Variable ratio steering. Steering column stalk controls for washer/wiper and headlights. Locking fuel filler door.

To Keep Your New GLC Looking New
Even at GLC's amazingly low price you still get protective bodyside mouldings, bumper guards front and rear, plus a rugged unit body that helps resist corrosion because it has been completely dipped in a cathodic electro-coating as a part of the paint process. There's even a 3-year anti-perforation warranty.†

Mazda GLC The Great Little Car
While you're thinking about all that standard GLC equipment, don't forget that we're still talking about Canada's lowest priced hatchback. So see your Mazda dealer. You'll come to the same conclusion a lot of new GLC owners have – Great Little Car.

Romanow attacks ads, wants them scrapped

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government's $6-million advertising campaign on constitutional change has "fanned the paranoia" of provinces already afraid Ottawa will take unilateral action to change the British North America Act, Saskatchewan Attorney-General Roy Romanow said Wednesday.

Romanow later in the day asked federal Justice Minister Jean Chretien to scrap the campaign but Chretien refused to give a definite answer.

Romanow, co-chairman of the summer-long constitutional talks, referred to the campaign as "massive and ill-timed".

"The smartest thing would be to abandon the campaign," Romanow said during a speech and question-and-answer session with members of the National Press Club.

The advertising campaign does not directly promote federal proposals to change the 113-year-old BNA Act, the country's constitution, but the more existence of the ads has caused Romanow and other provincial ministers to say Ottawa appears to expect the talks will fail and unilateral action by Parliament will be necessary.

The federal government has threatened to conduct a national referendum on constitutional change if no agreement is reached with the provinces at a first ministers' conference here Sept. 8-12.

While the federal government could possibly win the referendum in the West, the controversy would likely fuel separatist feelings in the area, Romanow said.

Making an emotional pitch for greater provincial control over resources, Romanow said he was "moderately optimistic" the constitutional talks would be successful when the travelling roadshow was instigated June 9 by Prime Minister Trudeau and the 10 premiers.

But "the toque and the Uke" show — as the Ukrainian-speaking Romanow called it in honor of the French-Canadian Chretien and himself — had not gone well.

"My optimism has been eroded progressively by the federal government."

The federal government threatened unilateral action, took "a giant step backward" by demanding greater control over the economy and then began the advertising campaign.

Chretien tabled a paper at the opening of the talks saying Ottawa, backed by the courts, should have the power to prevent provinces from passing legislation discriminating against other provinces or from impeding the flow of goods, capital and labor across the country.

Romanow says such a power in federal hands would endanger such Saskatchewan programs as restricting the ownership of farm land by non-residents and giving Indians preference in employment programs.

The federal government would also gain greater control over the West's oil and natural gas. Revenues from natural resources in Saskatchewan account for one-third of the provincial budget.

Because those revenues are so important to the province, Romanow said he could not hope to convince his mother or other residents of his hometown of Saskatoon that the federal proposals are accountable.

His winning ways make no friends

TORONTO (CP) — Last year, Bill Moore won 80 stuffed poodles at the Canadian National Exhibition.

This year, the Ajax, Ont., man plans to win 100 — if the concession operators will let him play.

He says the operators of several of the games of skill on the midway are tired of his winning ways and have banned him from their booths.

"It's just downright unfair, undemocratic and besides — they're poor losers," Moore, 38, said Wednesday.

Moore said he's still welcome — sort of — at the games run by Conklin Shows of Canada, the Toronto company that manages the CNE midway. They'll allow to win one stuffed toy a day.

How does Bill do it?

He says you need a good aim, a steady hand and you must stay sober. Also, watch how the concessionaire pitches a quarter onto a spot, stands up a bottle with a string or lobs a ball into a milk can.

Nurses win $5,000 pay hike

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal government nurses are getting a four-stage wage increase that lifts their average salary to $21,432 from $16,001 during two years in a contract agreement announced Wednesday.

Treasury board said the substantial increase is necessary because raises for nurses in the private sector had surpassed the government nurses' wage to the point where the government was having trouble recruiting new nurses and keeping those already on staff.

The 1,450 federal nurses work in hospitals and health services provided by the veterans affairs department, the health and welfare department and the prisons.

In a two-year period retroactive to last Christmas Eve, the nurses will receive these average increases: 9.2 per cent retroactive to Dec. 24, 1979, and 6.5 per cent Sept. 29, 1980, and 8.9 per cent Feb. 2, 1981 and 5.6 per cent Oct. 26, 1981.

The increases were agreed upon three weeks ago following difficult and lengthy negotiations headed by conciliator Ken Strike. The details had been kept secret until the nurses, represented by the Professional Institute of the Public Service union, finished voting on the contract.

"The agreement provides rates of pay which are competitive with rates of pay for nurses in the outside sector," treasury board said.

"As a result of recent substantial wage increases provided to nurses in other jurisdictions, very serious recruitment and retention problems developed within federal hospitals. Therefore, it was necessary to take steps to correct the wage disparities."

The agreement also provides for improvements in vacation leave, overtime, shift and weekend premiums, responsibility and allowances for responsibility, education and prison work.

Munro back in hospital

HAMILTON, Ont. (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister John Munro was reported in satisfactory condition Wednesday night in McMaster Medical Centre here with a what hospital officials described as a facial abscess.

A spokesman for Munro's office in Ottawa said the minister was admitted to hospital during the weekend following an operation Friday for removal of a wire jaw brace implanted following an accident in June.

Spokesmen for Munro said at that time the minister suffered a broken jaw as a result of a fall in the shower of his Hamilton home. There was much speculation at the time that the minister had actually received his injuries as the result of a beating.

Riley new NIB chief

CALGARY (CP) — Del Riley, president of the Union of Ontario Indians, upset Bob Manuel 34-32 to win the presidency of the National Indian Brotherhood today.

Riley edged Manuel, chief of the Neskainlith band near Kamloops, despite an endorsement from departing brotherhood president Noel Starblanket.

The election wasn't confirmed until after a 20-minute wrangle over the rules. One rule stated the winning candidate needed 35 of a possible 68 votes, but only 66 votes were cast since the two-man Yukon delegation was told Tuesday it only had observer's status at the four-day brotherhood conference.

The brotherhood council wanted to invalidate the ballot on technicalities, but telegates accepted a motion by Prince Edward Island delegates to let the vote stand.

Meanwhile, Sykes Powderface of the Stony band from Morley, Alta, defeated Arnold Goodleaf of Caughnawata, Que. by a 38-28 margin for the vice-presidency.

Grain embargo 'a meaningless political sham'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Local shipping and grain executives say the embargo on wheat sales to the Soviet Union, prompted by that country's invasion of Afghanistan, is a meaningless political sham.

Canada had promised the U.S., which had asked allies to observe its ban, that it would limit sales to the Soviets to "traditional levels". But sales this year have totalled 3.8 million tonnes, compared to 1.6 million tonnes in 1978-79.

James Starkey, deputy under-secretary for the U.S. agriculture department, said in Washington that the 3.8-million-tonne figure was acceptable to the United States.

"Some years Canada's exports have been as highnas five million tonnes and in discussions among exporting countries it was generally agreed that something like 3.8 million would be a reasonable figure for Canada in view of its historical trade," he said.

Canadian officials later said they thought traditional levels would be about five million tonnes. While Canada was pulling out of the embargo from a practical standpoint, it would honor its commitment to hold down sales to traditional levels, they said.

One Vancouver shipping company says the Canadian wheat board, which markets grain to other countries, is actually favoring the Russians in allocating available grain stocks this year. Others, such as chartered ships taking grain to Bangladesh under Ottawa's foreign-aid program, had been kept waiting at anchor in the city's harbor.

Shippers say the board has been paying lip service to President Jimmy Carter's U.S. grain embargo while helping the Russians by accepting their ships in Vancouver ahead of contract time.

"The Russians have got a bad crop year and they know Canada's crop isn't going to be that good, so they are trying to get as much as quickly as they can," said a Vancouver agent for Morflot, the Soviet shipping line.

"They go out on the charter market, pick up a pile of ships at one time and head them towards Vancouver."

"Basically, there was never any doubt that the grain was going to move out of Vancouver. It was business as usual. The embargo didn't affect anything."

Jack Loney, Sakatchewan Wheat Pool Vanciuver manager, agreed that the embargo has had no effect on wheat sales to Russia.

"Unlike politicians, we try to operate with a low profile," he said. "Our attitude is let's move the grain and get the bloody job done."

It had been alleged that at least one additional shipment, covered by the pre-embargo contract, was made to the Soviet Union in direct violation of the embargo.

On July 9, the Norwegian freighter, Arthur Stove, was listed as docked here to pick up 54,000 tonnes of wheat destined for Antwerp. However, Morflot confirmed the vessel was on charter to the Soviet Union and its destination was Leningrad.

Arms firm fined

MONTREAL (CP) — Space Research Corp. (Que.) was fined a total of $55,000 today after pleading guilty to violating the United Nations arms embargo of South Africa by shipping "at least 33,000 long-range artillery shells and howitzer parts to that country.

The firm received the maximum fine of $25,000 on one count of violating the ban on arms exports to South Africa set out in the Canadian Import and Export Permits Act. The charges were laid Wednesday by the federal Crown prosecutor's office.

It was also fined the maximum $5,000 on a total of six counts covering export of howitzer parts and false declarations of destination on export permits.

The company, whose 8,000-acre compound straddles the U.S.-Canada border at Highwater, Que., and North Troy, Vt., was fined $45,000 in June by U.S. District Judge James Holden after senior executives pleaded guilty to the charges.

Space Research founder Gerald Bull and former company president Rodgers Gregory were sentenced to one year in jail although six months of each sentence were suspended.

Chance to skewer the queen

HAMBURG, N.Y. (CP) — They're worth only 82 cents U.S. but — after a little target practice — Canadian dollars could win you the grand prize at the Erie County Fair.

For $1, fair patrons get three chances to skewer a crisp, green, Canadian $1 bill. Hit the bill with a dart and you win a small stuffed toy. Hit the Queen and you win a larger prize. If the Queen falls prey to all three darts, the grand prize is yours.

Operators at other midway both are using stars for targets, "but they just don't attract people the way money does," Thomas Rogers, operator of the dart booth, said.

"If this was Canada, I'd use American dollars or Mexican pesos."

Hatfield to answer charges

FREDERICTON (CP) — Premier Richard Hatfield pledged Wednesday to fully answer charges levelled this week by Opposition Leader Joe Daigle concerning alleged improprieties by Hatfield or his cabinet.

In a release through the government information service, Hatfield, who was out of the province and unreachable, said he will answer accusations of lying and political kickbacks at a news conference here Aug. 26.

Daigle charged Tuesday that Hatfield lied in connection with the trial of former Progressive Conservative fund raiser Francis E Atkinson, who was found guilty in provincial court of corruptly paying a government employee but was given an absolute discharge.

The bidding:

Once upon a time there lived a jackass who refused to learn anything at all about conventions. He thought conventions were strictly for the birds.

One day the jackass was playing in a game with a mongoose. Now the mongoose was certainly not the best player in the animal kingdom, but he did know a thing or two about conventions. He used to read every bridge book and magazine he could lay his paws on.

In this hand, their opponents — an owl (who sat South) and a pussycat (who sat North) —, got to six notrump on the bidding shown. The mongoose, thoroughly familiar with the slam-doubling convention, doubled six notrump. He knew that the double of the slam called for his partner to lead the first suit bid by dummy. The mongoose was sure that a heart lead would beat the slam.

But the jackass could not resist his impulse to lead the jack of spades. He knew he was supposed to lead a heart but, being a very stubborn critter, he just wouldn't do it. He wasn't going to be swayed by any newfangled conventions, regardless of what anybody did or said.

The owl played low from the pussycat's hand and the mongoose also played low. (Had he taken the ace, South would have had twelve easy tricks.) The owl won the spade with the king and, being a wise old owl, he knew that the mongoose had doubled the slam because he had both the king of hearts and ace of spades.

So the owl cashed the A-K-Q of diamonds and six clubs, reducing the pussycat's hand to the queen of spades and A-Q of hearts. The mongoose's last three cards were the ace of spades and K-J of hearts. The owl then blinked knowingly and led a spade — and the mongoose's goose was cooked!

Someone up there's watching Ray

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — If the Titanic set sail today, there seems little doubt that Ray Linnen would be watching from the pier, having arrived too late to make the trip.

At least a dozen times in his 68 years, Linnen has narrowly missed quick trips to the Great Beyond. He has sidestepped a killer tornado. Oil rigs have blown sky high when he's left to answer the phone. And planes he should have been on have crashed.

"There's a time and a place for everybody's death," mused Linnen, relaxed and apparently safe in his Wichita home. "When it's your time, you'll go. It just hasn't been my time yet."

His first close encounters with death came when Linnen was eight. He was standing on a street corner in Arkansas City, Kan., getting ready to cross the street. But he decided to wait.

A moment later, a car sped in front of him and slammed into a telephone pole, killing three people.

While in his early 20s, Linnen was working the graveyard shift at the Golden Rule Refinery in Wichita. The relief man came in early one morning and urged Linnen to go home.

While making the rounds Linnen should have made, the man was killed in a boiler explosion.

Linnen was working late on an oil rig in southern Kansas 25 years ago when he decided to head for home. He planned to make his usual stop on the way at an ice cream parlor in Udall.

When he got there, "for some reason I decided not to stop for ice cream," Linnen said. "I don't know why. I always had before."

Five minutes later, while Linnen was safely on his way home, the deadliest tornado in Kansas history slammed into Udall, levelling the ice cream parlor and killing seven people inside. Seventy-three others were killed and 200 were injured in the town of 450.

At first, Linnen figured his close calls were just coincidental. Luck, perhaps. Now he sees them as Divine Providence.

"It's just the Lord watching over me," says the retired tax planning specialist and oilman who has taught Sunday school at his Baptist church most of his adult life. "The Lord has a hand in it some way."

At age 25, Linnen was on his honeymoon in Colorado. He crossed a bridge during a ferocious storm and pulled to the roadside. Minutes later, floodwaters swept the bridge away.

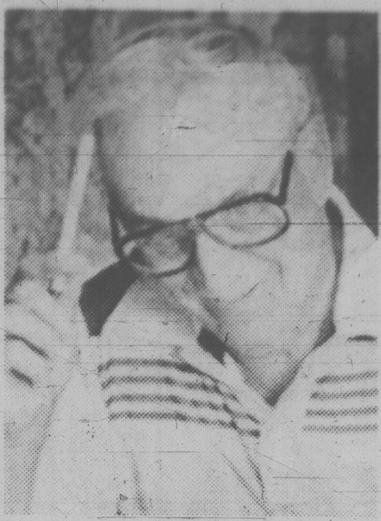
In 1970, Linnen was making arrangements to start a charter plane service for a group of investors. He was alloted five free seats on the maiden flight in exchange for his tax-planning work.

But he backed out at the last minute. The deal went ahead and the plane crashed, killing 31 people.

Another plane he missed in California also crashed in the Rockies.

"In every one of those situations, I should have been dead," Linnen says. "When I die, somebody may say, 'He wasn't so lucky after all.' But I have no fear of death. When the Lord calls you, you'll go.

"He's just not through with me yet."



LINNEN

Iran turns ire on Soviets, too

The Associated Press

Iran told the Soviet Union today to cut its embassy staff in Tehran because of alleged Kremlin support to the Kurdish rebels battling Ayatollah Khomeini's regime. It called the Soviet Union "no less satanic than the U.S.A." and compared Soviet strategy to that of U.S. capitalism.

Up to now, most of the revolutionary regime's anger has been directed at the U.S. government and the 52 Americans taken hostage more than nine months ago when the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was seized by pro-Khomeini Islamic militants.

Tehran Radio said the tirade against the Kremlin, the other superpower, was in a message sent by Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh to Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko through the Soviet embassy in Tehran, replying to a Gromyko letter of July 9.

"We shall not forget how the Soviet government treated our people during the past half century," Ghotbzadeh said, in particular, "the occupation of part of our sacred land and the emergence of a party which, since its foundation, has served as a fifth column for your country in our beloved land."

Ghotbzadeh apparently was referring to the Soviet occupation of Azerbaijan in northwest Iran in 1946, and to Iran's Communist Tudeh party.

FRIDAY & SATURDAY ONLY

WHAT NUMBER, PLEASE?

WE WILL ACCEPT COLLECT CALLS REGARDING VIVITAR PRODUCTS. ASK FOR 'VIVITAR DEPARTMENT.' BE AN EARLY BIRD AND SHOP BY PHONE. HAVE YOUR VISA OR MASTER CARD ACCOUNT NUMBER READY. SHIPPING CHARGE OF $2.00 INCLUDES SHIPPING, HANDLING AND INSURANCE TO ANY PLACE IN CANADA.

Let it be clearly understood that our policies may be vague, may vary from day to day and also may depend on whether we like you or not.

There's no truth to the rumour that Nelson Dewey gets paid in outdated film for drawing cartoons for us.

Our store is air-conditioned [we're optimists!]

We guarantee our lenses are unaffected by our mental abberations and our flash guns are brighter than we are.

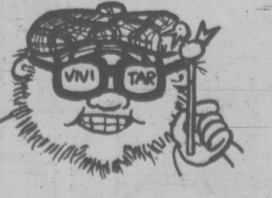
PLEASE DON'T

Tell us that you didn't expect to find such a big beautiful store like ours "in the middle of nowhere." We promise not to make comments about where YOU live.

Please feel free to list your complaints about our store in this space: ☐

Why don't you stand up and be counted among the vast numbers who don't quite understand these silly advertisements!

ANNOUNCEMENT:



Vivitar Sales Representative Doug Zaph will be in the store on Friday and Saturday. Be nice to him, please!

Laker slashes fares for reserved seats

LONDON (AP) — Skytrain pioneer Sir Freddie Laker stepped up the Atlantic air fares war today with an announcement of big reductions in the cost of reserved seats this fall and winter.

However, Laker's basic, no-frills and no-reservation Skytrain fares to New York, Los Angeles and Miami will go up slightly. They nevertheless remain lower than standby fares offered by competitors, Laker claimed.

The big cuts come Oct. 15 when Laker's reserved-seat, one-way economy fare to New York will be £92 ($219 U.S.) compared with £112 ($266) for the same off-peak season last year.

To Los Angeles, the price is slashed from £179 ($426) to £134 ($319), while a one-way reserved ticket to Miami has been fixed at £101 ($240).

"The time has come when air fares must no longer be tarted up," Laker told a news conference.

"Too many airlines promote their fares and then restrict the capacity of the aircraft. We, on the other hand, are maintaining the original concept of last-minute reservations and a guaranteed seat at the lowest possible price."

Sixty per cent of seats on Laker's transatlantic aircraft are reserved, the remainder for daily standby applicants.

Laker said he has eliminated "advance purchase" tickets requiring booking three weeks in advance, a minimum stay of one week and a cancellation fee.

With the new type of reserved ticket, a passenger can reserve any time, leave any time and come back any time. Meals are included, money is refunded in case of cancellation and there are discounts for children.

The no-reservation Skytrain package for the fall offers a one-way fare to New York of £78 ($186), to Los Angeles £109 ($259) and Miami £82 ($195).

Laker said this will compare with off-peak standby fares announced last month by British Airways and TWA of £82 ($195) to New York.

Laker Aiways made a pre-tax profit of £3.8 million ($9 million) in the last financial year and Laker said the number of 1980 passengers has already exceeded the total for the whole of last year.

Bloodless coup in Surinam

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (UPI) — The president of Surinam, Johan Ferrier, has been deposed in a bloodless coup and the Cabinet has handed its authority to the army, reports reaching the Netherlands said today.

The Dutch news agency ANP reported that a state of emergency was declared this morning in the former Dutch colony, the constitution was suspended indefinitely and a 7 p.m. to 4 a.m. curfew was imposed.

An official at the Dutch Foreign Ministry in The Hague said Thursday there had been no official news from the former Dutch colony on the northeastern coast of South America.

"All communications with Paramaribo, the capital, was cut on Wednesday evening. We have heard nothing official about the changed situation, but then the country has been fully independent since 1975, so there is no obligation to tell us anything," the official said.

Peony: lush and irresistible garden notes

by helen chesnut

One of the most popular perennial plantings among home gardeners is the peony and it is really no wonder for not only do peonies make a beautifully lush, almost tropical type bush to adorn the garden, but those huge, fluffy blooms are impossible to resist.

If your peonies are getting a bit large and unwieldy and perhaps didn't bloom this year as profusely as usual, it may well be that they require dividing. If this is the case with yours, include it as a "must" chore to be carried out in the early fall.

Peonies must be divided and reset so that they can become well established by the time colder weather arrives. The hardest part of the operation is digging up those mammoth roots with minimal damage to the tissues, and cutting down the foliage a bit first will help simplify the operation.

Once the entire clump is lifted, wash it off with the hose so that you can see what you are doing. Break apart by hand the pieces of root that will come away easily. Some you will have to sever with a sharp knife and large clumps will have to be pried apart with two garden forks back to back, or with the deft use of a sharp spade.

Whatever method you use, you want to end up with a root division that makes a good healthy clump, with at least four budding eyes. Each clump is planted with the eyes resting two inches (five centimetres) below the soil surface. If you end up with a whole lot of clumps, choose out the strongest looking.

It really is best to plant the divisions in a different site to avoid the emergence of any possible soil-borne peony diseases to which this plant is prone. However, if you have your heart set on having a peony in the same spot as you dug it out from, I would take some worthwhile precautions.

Dig up and haul away as much of the soil from the original site as possible. Replace it with fresh garden soil from another spot, preferably one that has never seen a peony in its life.

Once the divisions are set in scratch in about a tablespoonful of fertilzer around each planting. Keeping in mind the fact that these plants are long-living, it's good practice to build up the soil in which they reside with materials such as peat moss or ground bark.

While you are in the peony dividing business, consider purchasing and planting some of the lesser known and more exotic peonies if they are available locally. Most nurseries seem to carry only the more common varieties but you can seek out those dealers who specialize in this perennial and offer some that are more appealing to sophisticated tastes.

Many home gardens feature peonies which are the standard big, June-blooming doubles that come in light pink, white, deep pink or crimson, but there are others very worthy of consideration. The newer herbaceous hybrids, for example, offer new colors — ivories, new pinks, peach, shrimp, salmon, coral and cherry tones, scarlets and reds.

These add a new season as well, since they bloom two weeks ahead of the earliest old standards. Adding a couple of these would extend your peony blooming season considerably.

Another possibility is to try the Japanese Trees Peonies which are not in fact trees but shrubs. In winter, the woody stems remain and on these are next spring's leaf and flower buds. Their colors are particularly lovely — soft pinks, glistening whites and coppery reds. Their leaves and branches have an elegance and grace that alone would justify their planting.

Depending on how cold the winters are, Japanese Tree Peonies will grow from the size of a standard peony bush up to eight feet (2½ metres) in height. And though they look tropical, they are almost as hardy as the standards and bloom ahead by a week or two. So, if you love peonies and are an adventurous home gardener, do try some of these more exotic plantings.

Just a reminder that the Sidney and North Saanich Garden Club's Summer Show is set for Saturday from 2 to 9 p.m. and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in Sanscha Hall on Beacon Ave. in Sidney.

Refreshments will be available and there will be draws for numerous prizes. Admission is 50 cents and youngsters under 12 accompanied by an adult may enter free.

Power ploy by Pinochet

SANTIAGO, CHILE (UPI) — Gen. Augusto Pinochet, the head of Chile's ruling military junta, has announced a national referendum next month to approve a new constitution that will keep him in power for another eight years.

The 64-year-old president, said the election will be held Sept. 11 — the seventh anniversary of the military regime's ouster of the late Salvador Allende's Marxist government.

Soviets bolster their navy

LONDON (AP) — The Soviet Union has welded a naval force "far beyond the needs of defence of the Soviet sea frontiers," and is bolstering its armada with a powerful new nuclear-powered aircraft carrier and two giant battle cruisers, the authoritative Jane's Fighting Ships reported today.

"The Soviet navy at the start of the 1980s is truly a formidable force," said the usually-reliable analysis of the world's navies in its 1980-81 edition.

Capt. John Moore, a retired Royal Navy officer who edits the annual reference work, said the first frames of the new 75,000-ton Soviet carrier are in place at the Nikolayev South shipyard near the Black Sea.

He predicted the Soviets eventually may build four of the giant carriers, which would be matched only by the latest in the U.S. fleet, the Nimitz and the Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The Soviet carriers are likely to be armed with two-seater swept-wing aircraft, capable of carrying 10,000 pounds of weapons at twice the speed of sound, the report said.

In addition to the carrier, the Soviets are building two cannon and missile-armed 32,000-ton Kirov-class cruisers, and may build two more, creating the nucleus "of a force hitherto unrecognized in the Soviet fleet, the strike group," Moore wrote.

With the new cruisers, Moore said, the Soviets are following the U.S. idea that cruisers should protect carriers and also operate independently.

Beside the Kirov-class cruisers, the Kremlin is building three different classes of cruisers, ranging down to 7,600-tonners, he said.

Moore criticized U.S. politicians for slowing down the building of new ships, making them ultimately more expensive because of inflation.

He also fired a broadside at the NATO fleet, accusing members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization of "dissipating scarce funds on out-moded ideas and equipping their fleets with obsolescent systems in over-expensive ships."

More rocks fly in Cape Town

CAPE TOWN (AP) — Isolated incidents of stone-throwing were reported early today in the black township of Nyanga near Cape Town, continuing four days of South African racial violence that has claimed five lives.

The latest deaths were reported Wednesday. Police said an 18-year-old black man was shot to death by police at the Crossroads squatter's camp near here. They said he had tried to hurl a gasoline bomb at a police vehicle.

Another man died of wounds suffered Monday when his vehicle was stoned near the camp.

Mobs went on a rampage at the camp on Monday after police dragged blacks from so-called "pirate" taxis that were used to transport workers supporting a bus boycott called to protest increased fares.

Snakes drafted

PRETORIA (UPI) — The South African army's massive recruiting campaign is under way — not for soldiers but for deadly pythons.

Citizens have been asked to donate pet pythons to the army because South Africa is losing its war against an infestation of rock rabbits on the Botswana-Zimbabwe border.

Rock rabbits are the favorite food of pythons, an army spokesman said, and the snakes can get into places where soldiers simply can't go to flush out the invaders.

Carter wins even Kennedy

NEW YORK (CP) — President Carter won the Democratic party's nomination Wednesday night for a second run at the presidency in November, together with a belated personal endorsement from defeated rival Senator Edward Kennedy.

Trying to put a stamp of unity on convention proceedings that were often fractious and bitter, Kennedy called Carter within minutes of his victory to promise to "support and work for the re-election" of the president.

"It is imperative that we defeat Ronald Reagan in 1980," Kennedy said in a terse five-line statement released to reporters, acknowledging the Republican presidential nominee's strong challenge to Democrats' grip on the White House and Congress.

Though Kennedy had withdrawn his bid for the nomination Monday night, it was clear that the powerful speech he delivered Tuessay night calling for Democrats to seek "economic justice" for needy Americans in a return to traditional policies, had influenced the convention greatly.

There were 1,146 delegate votes for Kennedy, some from state delegate leaders who announced they were voting "with our hearts" as Kennedy supporters periodically sent up "We want Teddy" chants.

But Carter won handily with 2,129 votes, well above the 1,666 he needed, with 59 votes going to minor candidates or left uncommitted.

Not until Texas voters sent Carter over the top, a few minutes past midnight, did the usual convention-floor fever strike Madison Square Garden, as delegates released thousands of green and white balloons and start "We want Jimmy" cries. Green is the Carter campaign color.

Even then, it took a phone call from Kennedy to his home-state supporters from Massachusetts to convince them that, in the interests of unity, they should agree to make Carter's victory unanimous.

Carter stayed away from the convention, but watched the voting on television in his hotel suite, calling "Come on, Texas" and finally waving his fist in the air when it was clear he had won the nomination.

The convention's final act occurs tonight, when Carter makes his acceptance speech, and sets the tone for what is expected to be an uphill fight against the Republicans led by Reagan and against independent John Anderson. Carter aides hope Kennedy will appear with Carter.

Oswald to be dug up

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — The Morning News says Dallas County Medical Examiner Dr. Charles Petty plans to exhume the body of accused presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald from his Fort Worth grave.

Quoting sources, the newspaper says that Petty proposes the exhumation Friday in an attempt to determine whether the body is actually that of Oswald, named by the Warren commission as the lone assassin of President John F. Kennedy in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

Petty would not confirm nor deny the report, the newspaper says.

Michael Eddowes, a British author and lawyer, five years ago questioned the identity of the body that was buried in 1963 in Rose Hill Cemetery on Fort Worth's east side.

Eddowes, who last year filed suit in state district court at Fort Worth in an attempt to have the body exhumed, said he believes the body buried there was not Oswald but a Soviet secret agent who returned to the United States from Russia in 1962, posing as Oswald.

Toddler drowns in mop bucket

OXNARD, Calif. (UPI) — A toddler taking her first steps tumbled into a mop bucket and drowned just two weeks before her first birthday.

Authorities said Wednesday that Hattie Marie Fredrick wandered away from a group of older children watching television and explored the service porch where the mop bucket stood filled with water.

The girl's parents, Greg and Teri Fredrick, were in a dining room playing cards with the child's grandmother Tuesday afternoon when the fatal accident occurred.

The child had apparently been in the pail about five minutes when her mother discovered her head down in the mop bucket.

Mrs. Fredrick said the baby was "fighting for air" when she was pulled from the bucket, but fireman George Todd said the baby "was not breathing at all" when he arrived.

today's markets

Toronto

The Toronto stock market was up sharply in active mid-afternoon trading Thursday.

Advances outnumbered declines 253 to 159 with 210 issues unchanged.

Trading in shares of Basic Resources International S.A. was also halted at the opening pending an announcement and the stock last traded at $15¾.

Among industrials, Great Lakes Forest advanced 1⅝ to $57½, Falconbridge Nickel 1½ to $139, Seagram Co. 1⅜ to $68, Texasgulf 1¼ to $48¼ and Alberta Natural Gas 1 to $24½

Du Pont Canada A lost 1¼ to $28¾, R. L. Crain ¾ to $13, Canadian Foremost ⅝ to $12¾, Automotive Hardware A ½ to $10 and Dominion Citrus and Drugs 40 cents to $4.35.

Dome Mines gained 3⅛ to $126, Carolin Mines 2¼ to $20½ and Campbell Red Lake 2 to $65¼. Pine Point Mines fell 1⅛ to $38½ and Denison Mines ⅜ to $55¼.

Worldwide Energy rose 2¼ to $23⅛, United Canso Oil and Gas 1¼ to $23¼ and Bonanza Oil and Gas 1⅛ to $11⅝. Canadian Natural Resources slipped ¾ to $20¾ and Lochiel Explorations ½ to $7⅜.

Vancouver

Prices were up in heavy early trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Of the issues that traded, 50 posted gains, 26 were losers and 47 were unchanged.

Pacific Cypress Minerals was the centre of most of the action and gained .30 to $4.65 on 202,700 shares. Among other resource traders, Jubilee explorations gained a dime to .35 on 17,500 shares and Waddy Lake added .20 to $2.75 on 13,000.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led industrial issues and was unchanged at $6.75 on 8,180 shares. Taro Industries gained .15 to $4.90 on 2,900 shares and Balco Industries was steady at $7 on 900 shares.

Wildrose Petroleum paced curb traders and gained .09 to $1.15 on 14,000 shares. March Resources added a nickel to $2.45 on 5,000 shares and Maymac Exploration dropped a dime to $1.90 on 2,500 shares.

New York

Stock prices on the New York stock exchange rose in fairly active trading today as the blue chip issues rebounded a bit from recent losses.

Oil, electronics and data processing stocks were generally higher. But there were also signs of bargain hunting among secondary issues after the market's losses in the past two session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which dropped almost 15 points in the previous two sessions, was up 5.80 to 955.03 by 2 p.m.

Gaining issues outnumbered losers by a 2-to-1 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume was 31.20 million shares, as of two-thirds of the way through the trading session.

Pogo Producing, an offshore oil and gas development company, gained 1¼ to $24⅜ in active NYSE trading. Tesoro Petroleum gained 1½ to $25½ also in active trading.

Mesa Petroleum jumped 3⅜ to $50⅛ following Wednesday's announcement of a limited partnership with Texaco for oil and gas development. Texaco was up ⅜ to $37⅜.

London

The London stock market was mixed near the close of quiet trading Thursday.

The Financial Times index was up 0.7 to 475.3.

Industrials, golds and oils advanced.

Canadian shares were mixed.

All digital, microprocessor controlled, starting an exciting new trend!

After our STA-2200 the conventional receiver will never be the same again! No dial, no knob, no tuning meters! Instead, bright, fluorescent digits display each station's frequency! A frequency synthesized tuner (with quartz-locked, microprocessor-controlled circuitry) ends mechanical tuning. 60 watts RMS per channel, with no more than 0.02% total harmonic distortion. Many more exciting features! Memory pushbuttons — store 6 FM & 6 AM stations! Scan button — sample each station locked in the memory, or you can manually check entire FM or AM band. The bright, fluorescent frequency display becomes a quartz locked digital clock, when receiver is switched off. 5-step LED signal strength indicator. Dolby† decoder. Dual dubbing & monitoring capability. 2-step FM muting. Loudness button. 11-step bass & treble controls. Detented dual-concentric volume/balance controls. MOSFET power transistors — for ultrahigh-speed operation, stunningly accurate sound reproduction! Automatic overload protection circuitry. It all adds up to a masterpiece of "superb workmanship and performance*"! 31-2085
